Farr survives fight of his political life

■ The race was as close as it was because McCampbell seized the issues that were crucial in other districts.

By PAUL WOLF

IN THE final days of his congressional race against Bill McCampbell, Sam Farr, D-Carmel, "accentuated the positive," proclaiming the bright spots on his record and praising the president's overlooked successes.

And now, even after his victory Tuesday, the 17th District representative still feels the need to highlight the positive.

"We are truly watching a historic change," he said in an interview with The Carmel Pine Cone Wednesday, resigned to the Republican takeover of both houses of Congress. "I believe we are lucky we can have a peaceful change of power, for that is what this country is all about."

Still, when Farr talks about his "mixed emotions" in the wake of election day, he is putting it mildly.

True enough, there was concern he would lose his seat to third-time congressional candidate McCampell,

The early votes showed Sam Farr trailing Bill McCampbell, but soon they shifted in favor of the incumbent, bringing smiles to Farr, wife Shary and Chelsea Allen (middle), daughter of congressional aide Becky Allen.

A victory for 'the center'

McPherson hopes to live up to reputation as moderate problem-solver

By PAUL WOLF

Bruce McPherson returns to Sacramento for a two-year term after Tuesday's win.

IT WAS a movement to the right for most of the nation, but in the 27th State Assembly District, "it was a shift to the center."

The unofficial final numbers from Tuesday seem to confirm Bruce McPherson's assessment. As the newly re-elected Santa Cruz-based legislator put it, "The district will never become overwhelmingly Republican or move totally to the right."

And that doesn't trouble McPherson, who first won office in a special election to replace Sam Farr in November 1993.

He hopes to be a vehicle for consensus-building, bipartisanship and moderate solutions on issues of concern to the district, such as the ongoing redevelopment of Fort Ord and salt-water intrusion.

In an interview Wednesday morning with The Carmel Pine Cone, he suggested he would not shy away from certain issues that have been generally associated with Democrats.

For example, he plans to tackle campaign finance reform, although in a less far-reaching manner than Bill Monning did. While Monning refused political action committee (PAC) money during the campaign, McPherson intends to seek contribution limits of $1,000 for individuals and $5,000 for PACs.

"This isn't Bill's influence because I brought up (these goals) even before this campaign," McPherson said.

In addition, he said he would propose "improvements" to health care. McPherson, who opposed Proposition

Carmel native secures 33rd Assembly seat

By PAUL WOLF

ON THE face of it, Tom Bordonaro would appear to be just another candidate who was carried by the winds of this week's sweeping Republican victories.

But many facts distinguish the businessman-turned-politician.

First, our parochial tendencies gravitate toward the Carmel connection. The Paso Robles resident may have just made a name for himself by being elected Tuesday to the 33rd State Assembly District, which is based in San Luis Obispo County. But many will remember this: Carmel High, Class of '77.

Second, he does not appear as the typical candidate in the running for

CHS senior Todd Hoskins, who also serves as president of the Governing Student Council (formerly the Associated Student Body), showed the effects of 24-hour sleep deprivation at about 9:45 a.m. last Sunday, minutes before the event ended.

IT WAS a dark and stormy night...

Despite drizzle and high winds, more than 500 participants, chaperones and volunteers turned out for last weekend's "24-Hour Relay Challenge" at Carmel High School.

The CHS football field was literally transformed into "tent city" as walkers and runners warmed their tired feet by a large bonfire.

"I now believe in miracles," said Janet Myer, founder of Community Against Substance Abuse (CASA) and event co-chair. "It rained everywhere but on the CHS football field."

According to Myer, 40 teams of 10 stuck it out and circled the CHS track for 24 hours straight. The cause: to support drug-free programs for area youth.

"I couldn't be more pleased," Myer added. "All of the participants were enthusiastic and committed and supported each other the entire time."

By all accounts, the fund-raising event at CHS was the place to be last weekend. In fact, Myer said the only problem that arose was preventing non-participants from sneaking into the area.

Aside from a few minor sports injuries, there were no incidents. Security was provided by the Monterey County Sheriff's Department, which also assembled a team for the event: "The Fog Cutters." When it was all said and done, The Fog Cutters, also voted "most inspirational team," had logged 194 miles to lead the field.

CHS junior Rafael Perez was voted "most inspirational student" for going above and beyond the call of duty, followed by wheelchair-bound senior Mahlon McAnaney, who was voted a runner-up.

Myer thanked the many parent volunteers and chaperones who kept the snack bar open and recorded the miles logged by each team. "They were fabulous," she said. "They were energetic and stayed as long as they were needed."

In all, the 40 teams recorded nearly 4,500 miles in

FOCUS: CARMEL CITY COUNCIL RETREAT

City prepares for rocky future

■ At all-day meeting, council members discuss strategies for improving the city's financial footing; may include streamlining municipal operations.

By PAUL WOLF

ANTICIPATING A lean remainder of the decade, the Carmel City Council brainstormed on ways to improve its financial footing and streamline municipal operations.

The all-day retreat Friday began with City Administrator Jere Kersnar telling the five-member council what it already knew — that the boom of the 1980s is long over and the 1990s will be characterized by flat revenues.

Meanwhile, Kersnar said, Carmel may have to face overdue facility improvements and the prospect of more state "takeaways" from city coffers. The end result is fewer "real" dollars for the next several years.

"The state," Kersnar said, "is considering constitutional changes aimed at evening out the revenues between cities — the 'haves' and 'have-nots.' And since we get a lot of money from people living outside Carmel, this is not good news for us."

The state has claimed well over $100,000 in Carmel property taxes over the past two years. The city administrator predicted the state would target the city's sales tax revenue next — as much as 65 percent of that source from a town like Carmel.

Last year, Carmel drew nearly $1.7 million in sales tax revenues, according to Sandi Davenport, city financial services coordinator.

Councilwoman Paula Hazdovac said the current five-year financial forecasting the staff and council use may not be adequate. Ten-year planning may be in order, she argued.

The city's current $7.6 million budget is the first moderate-growth package since the recession, but it hardly signals a promising new direction.

In addition, the stabilization of city finances came with a price: Within the last three years, the city reduced its full-time labor force from 102 to 82 employees. Council members discussed hopes for better salaries for employees, but no mention was made of restoring departments to their original complements.

Looking toward lean, though perhaps not desperate, times, the council discussed the following potential strategies for improving the cities footing. They include:

■ Selling city properties.

This was not a new topic, and a degree of caution surrounds the possible disposal of assets. The pieces of real estate that were mentioned Friday were Rio Park and Flanders Mansion, although others have come up in the past.

Council rejects 'trial by fire' for job candidates

By PAUL WOLF

IT'S BEEN called a circus atmosphere, a public trial by fire. But it also is an effective way to get to know prospective candidates for the Carmel Planning Commission.

Nevertheless, it may not be appropriate for the village, according to Carmel City Council members, who intend to scrap the public interview process of picking commissioners.

At an all-day retreat Friday, the five council members said they hope to dump the three-year-old selection method. They plan to restore the standard appointment procedure used for all other boards and commissions.

The usual practice simply allows the mayor to nominate a qualified applicant and present the name to the full council for approval or rejection. No public interviews at Carmel City Hall. No special meetings. No nervous applicants. No carbon-copy questions.

"The atmosphere (of public interviews) has not been friendly; actually, it has been adversarial," said Councilman Bob Fischer.

The last two commissioners picked for the seven-member commission were Pope Coleman and Ron Bastian, selected last month. Some commission candidates have described an embarrassing ordeal in which their hopes for free public service have turned into a

November is ugly, April...bliss

■ Council members agree spring elections are worth the price.

By PAUL WOLF

CARMEL'S ELECTED officials believe they are blissfully insulated from the ugly taint of elections like the one that just passed.

"I would not like to see nasty and mean politics trickle down to our level," Councilman Bob Fischer said at an all-day city council retreat last Friday.

"It is a privilege for me to take part in Carmel's 78-year tradition of April elections," added Fischer, first elected to the council in 1986.

The issue of consoliding with the general elections has come up periodically, but it has never secured much support, despite the prospect of better turnouts and a savings of $4,000 to $5,000 per election.

Although Carmel elections have been notoriously strife-filled, council members agreed the village will never be a match for what goes on in the outside world.

Of the five council members, only Barbara Livingston stressed the merits of consolidation, noting the savings and the possibility of a more substantial electorate.

But Mayor Ken White may have made the keynote comment, saying, "We are losing traditions all the time, and I would hate to see us lose this one.

"We have to realize sometimes it costs more to be different."

Council members also were concerned about how Carmel issues would be drowned out by the political noise of the nation, state and region. Local candidates, in addition, would have to compete for the public's attention.

"I'd have to be standing at the Carmel Post Office with Bill Monning and Sam Farr, and I don't want to do that," Fischer joked.

CDF Highway 68 fire station readies for '95 relocation

■ The move to Pebble Beach will facilitate CHOMP buildout.

By SCOTT BREARTON

THE CALIFORNIA Department of Forestry and Fire Protection (CDF) will vacate its current Highway 68 location in October 1995 to make room for a new wing planned by Community Hospital of the Monterey Peninsula (CHOMP).

"It's a key location in the expansion plans for the hospital," said Tom Tonkin, president of the Community Hospital Foundation. "Without that land, growth is blocked."

The CDF plans to move to a new location just inside the Highway 1 Pebble Beach gate, a two-acre site provided by the Pebble Beach Co., according to Craig Anthony, San Benito-Monterey Ranger Unit Chief for the CDF.

While CDF has leased its present site from CHOMP since 1939, Anthony said the new Pebble Beach location will be more accessible for emergency equipment and the personnel who will share the new facility: CDF, the Cypress Fire Protection District and the Pebble Beach Community Services District (PBCSD).

"The most ideal spot for that station is as close to the intersection of Highway 68 and Highway 1 as you can get," noted Anthony, who also serves as chief of the Cypress Fire Protection District and PBCSD. "Most of our calls are toward Carmel, so the engines can come up and head down the hill."

Anthony said traffic can be congested in the area slated for the new station, but not as bad as the Highway 68 location.

"Traffic is tough in that area, but it's going to be better than what we have now," he said. "Highway 68 is very busy. You've got the light at the intersection and the light at the hospital."

The California Department of Forestry has leased this site from Community Hospital since 1939. In October 1995, the CDF will move to a new location, just inside the Highway 1 Pebble Beach gate.

According to Anthony, the development application includes plans for widening 17-Mile Drive by about 200 feet to provide a left-hand turn lane into the new station. "There's some minor work that needs to be done," he commented.

Approval process underway

Anthony said the CDF and Pebble Beach Co. are currently applying for use and zoning permits through the county planning commission and board of supervisors. The final use permit will be heard by the California Coastal Commission in January, he noted.

Praising the cooperation shown by all parties involved, Anthony added, "CHOMP, the Pebble Beach Co., the two fire districts and the state have all been working hard together to make sure this project is successful."

Tonkin said representatives from each party began meeting several months ago to consider possible options for relocating the station.

According to Tonkin, plans for the new single-story wing at CHOMP call for the expansion of many

2 lawsuits challenge EIR for new Los Padres Dam

By PAUL WOLF

OPPONENTS OF the proposed new Los Padres Dam on the upper Carmel River have found two legal avenues in their attempt to block the project.

The two independent actions include:

■ A lawsuit filed last month in Monterey County Superior Court and served to the Monterey Peninsula Water Management District by Galante Vineyards and two other Carmel Valley vineyards.

The lawsuit contends the new dam has the potential to level "economic devastation to our industry," as Jack Galante, general manager of Galante Vineyards, explained in an interview with The Carmel Pine Cone.

He said the "trapping of cold air" caused by the dam would significantly affect the productivity of some 150 or 200 agricultural acres in the Cachagua area.

"We believe the dam has the potential to render much of our land incapable of sustaining vineyards," Galante said.

The lawsuit is a legal challenge to the Sept. 19 MPWMD board decision to certify the final environmental impact report/statement (EIR/S) for the 24,000-acre-foot project. Walnut Creek-based attorney Marie Cooper, who is representing the plaintiffs, referred all comments to Galante.

He said filing a lawsuit was the only way for his industry to have its concerns addressed. A key request of the lawsuit is for a supplemental environmental study of the affected agricultural land, particularly the vineyards.

Galante also said "the intrusion of cold air" opens up the question of "a taking of land," for which compensation would be necessary.

The lawsuit argues alternative sites for the dam were not examined in sufficient detail.

■ A lawsuit also was filed in superior court and served to the MPWMD and the California-American Water Co. last Friday by Noel Mapstead, a Carmel artist and environmental activist.

Mapstead's action is independent of Galante's action, although it covers some of the same legal arguments geared at invalidating the EIR.

For starters, the lawsuit asserts the EIR fails to adequately examine alter-departments, including emergency, intensive care, surgery and cancer therapy, among others. An underground parking facility also will be built.

Ed Brown, vice president of planning for the Pebble Beach Co., said company officials were aware CDF was going to lose its lease and proposed the new site because of its proximity to the current fire station. The site has been used as a wood yard and as a borrow site for road-fill materials used by Caltrans.

"We thought it would be a good match, and they thought the same thing," said Brown. "What we came up with was what we thought was a win-win situation, both for the CDF and the Pebble Beach community."

According to Brown, facilities at the new site will include a 73-space employee parking lot as part of the Pebble Beach Co.'s voluntary in-forest trip-reduction plan. A park-and-ride shuttle service is planned by the company.

Brown noted the new station will house as many as 18 firefighters during peak fire season.

Construction of the new fire station will probably begin at the end of February or early March, depending on the weather, Anthony said.

Three Bosnian student refugees arrive on peninsula

Two teen-age boys — Damir Polic and Sabit Dumisic — enroll as juniors at Carmel High School

By SCOTT BREARTON

A LENGTHY effort by a local grassroots organization to bring Bosnian student refugees to the Monterey Peninsula is beginning to pay off, with the announcement that two teen-age boys enrolled at Carmel High School Monday.

According to Bob Rice, who has agreed to host one of two junior students at his Carmel Valley home, a third female student – Aida Mujacic – is now attending Pacific Grove High School. Mujacic joins Amna Karabegovic, 16, who arrived last August and also is attending PGHS.

We're really happy about it," said Rice, a Carmel-based public relations executive. "We still don't understand some of the difficulties we had before and we're disappointed that some of the kids we tried to get still haven't been able to get out...but we're delighted that these kids have made it."

'The two years of the war have been the worst experience in the life of any man, especially of a child's.'

— Damir Polic, 16

Rice referred to the refusal by U.S. Embassy officials to grant student visas to two other Bosnian teens on grounds there was no guarantee they would ultimately return to their homeland.

"We don't know why the embassy granted these kids visas and not some of the others," commented Rice. "It's hard to understand what the rationale was."

Damir Polic, 16, Sabit Dumisic, 17, and Mujacic arrived on the Monterey Peninsula last weekend, according to Rice. The trio will be staying with host families in the area.

The tone of Dumisic's letter of application tells much about his life in Bosnia: "...Before one month, my house was attacked three times by bombs and four times by automatic weapons. We were living a besieged existence in what remains of our home...

"...I don't have money to continue my school, so I hope you will be able to help me in that."

Similarly, Polic wrote: "...Life in Sarajevo is very difficult. The city has been under siege and constant shelling for over two years, and it has been very dangerous to move around. Children mostly stayed indoors, and parents were providing whatever they could. For a long time, we had no electrical power, water or gas. Food was also very scarce and very expensive."

'Difficult to live'

"...At the moment it is still very difficult to live in our town," he continued. "My parents work, but they are not paid...It is very difficult to get clothes, shoes and anything else needed for a normal life. It is also very difficult to get paper, pens, colors and other necessities for my education.

Hope on horizon for us at 'Apathy High'?

IT WAS a barren and unsightly place.

The bleachers were strewn with a few bored students, slouched back and talking to each other. A lonely figure stood before them all, trying in vain to raise some enthusiasm, like an insane lieutenant before a group of conscientious objectors.

As I made my way over to join the 15 sleeping seniors in our designated section, I realized most of my peers must have ditched. What kind of boring assembly has the administration offered us this time?

The 50th drug and alcohol prevention lecture? A student election? No way. It was a non-mandatory pep rally, with emphasis on non-mandatory.

No pep here

Carmel High School students are notorious for their lack of enthusiasm for school functions and involvement; the word "pep" is simply not in their vocabulary.

This issue has been addressed in a number of articles and joked about so often, some refer to the school as "Apathy High."

Honestly, my description of the pep rally is not an exaggeration. Students will do anything to get out of being asked by girls in strange outfits who wave pompoms to scream, "Go Padres!"

Some people have been known to have their parents call in and excuse them from attending the rallies. And some park their cars off campus, making freedom just a short run past the tennis courts.

In fact, many would rather sit in the library and do homework than endure an hour filled with inane class office. It was that same year Bordonaro graduated from high school that his life changed dramatically. Shortly after he moved out of Carmel to attend school at Cal Poly-San Luis Obispo, he was in a car accident that left him a quadriplegic.

Despite his misfortune, he continued his studies, eventually earning several degrees at Cal Poly and UC Davis, got married and became successful in a variety of business endeavors, including a vineyard and a tax-preparation business.

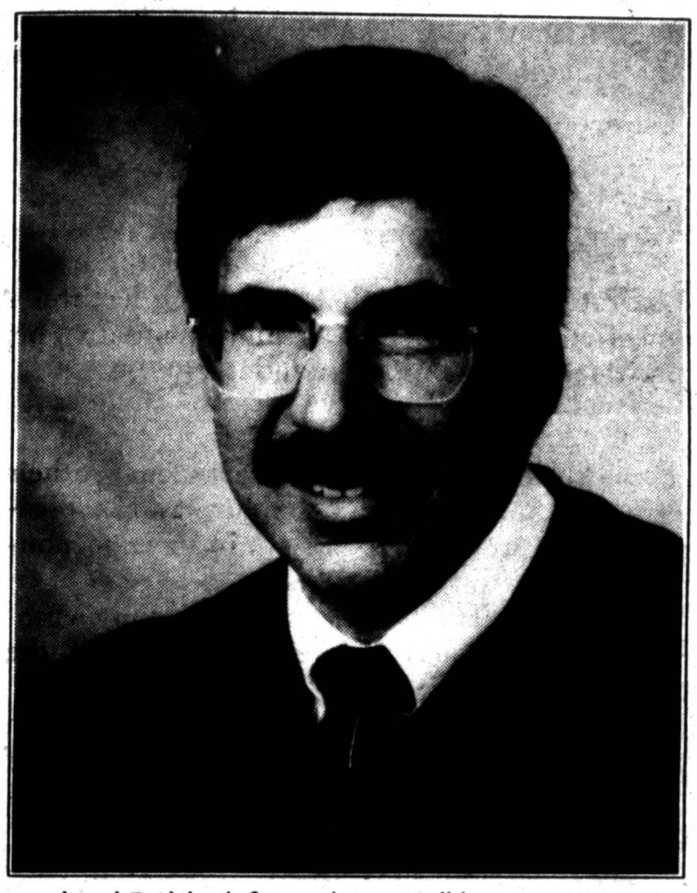
As candidate, his platforms have fit snugly not only with the conservative 33rd District but also with the tenor of the season. He has stressed the need to keep a check on taxes and excessive regulation while protecting the environment.

The key name in the 33rd District had been Assemblywoman Andrea Seastrand, a Republican who decided to step down after two terms and run against Democrat Walter Capps in the 22nd Congressional District election. (As of Wednesday afternoon, the unofficial final tally revealed them in a dead heat.)

As for Bordonaro, his was a remarkable showing. He trounced Democratic challenger John Ashbaugh 56.3 percent to 39.9 percent.

Tom Bordonaro won an Assembly seat Tuesday night.

Fields wins judges' race



Michael Fields defeated Ann Hill by 4,400 votes.

CV man will replace Anton

MUNICIPAL COURT Judge Michael Fields was elected Tuesday to serve on the bench in Monterey County Superior Court, Office 3.

According to the unofficial final tally, Fields earned 39,926 votes, a decisive victory over Monterey County Deputy District Attorney Ann Hill, who garnered 35,507.

Fields, of Carmel Valley, will replace Judge John Anton, who retired.

the 24-hour period from 10 a.m. last Saturday to 10 a.m. Sunday. Myer said approximately one-third of all CHS students and one-fourth of all Carmel Middle School students participated in the event, which raised more than $10,000 for Carmel Unified School District's peer counseling programs, Youth Community Services and CASA's drug-free programs.

One highlight of the event was a bagpipe performance by CHS parent Missy Jenkins at sunrise on Sunday morning, according to Myer.

"It was moving and spiritual," she concluded, noting the 24-Hour Relay Challenge will undoubtedly become an annual community event.

Bosnian students seek refuge at Carmel High

"The two years of the war have been the worst experience in the life of any man, especially of a child's."

Founded this spring, the Bosnian Student Project of Monterey and Santa Cruz Counties was formed to facilitate bringing Bosnian high school and college student refugees to the area to continue their education. The organization is working with other agencies to meet the challenges of sponsorship, visa applications and funding for deserving student refugees.

The coalition raised the funds necessary for round-trip airfare, health insurance, clothing and other personal expenses with the help of a grant from the Chapman Foundation of Carmel. The grant offset much of the cost of sponsoring the high school students, which amounts to about $7,000 per student.

Volunteers, host families and financial contributions are needed to bring more students from war-torn Bosnia to the United States.

"We're still working to bring other kids here," Rice noted.

McPherson vows to continue role as moderate legislator

186, the single-payer plan, did not specify what his proposed solutions may be.

During the campaign, McPherson targeted the center and, by all accounts, hit his mark.

He banked on his record as a moderate, a willing crosser of party lines on at least a few decisive occasions, as in his opposition to off-shore oil drilling.

The Monning camp regarded McPherson's vigorous campaigning as "an independent legislator" as an obvious campaign tactic, the necessary approach for a Republican on Democratic turf. But the electorate saw things McPherson's way.

The unofficial final tally reveals McPherson claimed the uncommitted center in a district that favors registered Democrats roughly 5-to-3.

The incumbent received 58,138 votes to Monning's 55,511. Libertarian candidate O. Robert Welch garnered 3,298.

(As of Wednesday, Monning would not concede defeat as several thousand late absentee ballots were still to be counted.)

The 27th District, which embraces the western portion of Monterey and Santa Cruz counties, was Farr's Democratic stronghold during his 16 years as assemblyman. McPherson, a retired editor of the Santa Cruz Sentinel, won office with a low voter turnout and an apparent disenchantment with the Democratic contender, Santa Cruz County Supervisor Gary Patton.

In the past year, McPherson was thrust into the scene just as major issues were coming to the fore, Fort Ord among them. He quickly become a player and co-authored legislation to set up the Fort Ord Reuse Authority.

McPherson said it was a challenge to retain his seat in a general election with higher turnout. "I had developed good name identification in the district, and people respect that," he said. "I kept the electoral base I started with last year and managed to build on it."

Bill Monning and his supporters were still opimistic Tuesday evening at a gathering for the Democratic candidate at the Monterey Beach Hotel.

Pennycook accomplishes goal of returning as supervisor

Shipnuck's successor will be a familiar face as former board member earns convincing victory

By SUSAN BECK

JUDY PENNYCOOK's successful bid Tuesday for supervisor of Monterey County's 2nd District fulfills a promise to return to the board after her interim seat ended last year.

"My determination to win was made when I left the board," Pennycook told The Carmel Pine Cone Tuesday evening. "I said, 'I'll be back' because I had not finished what I set out to do."

Pennycook and Russ Jeffries, a former mayor of Salinas, vied for the seat being vacated by Monterey County Supervisor Barbara Shipnuck, who has decided not to seek re-election after 16 years of service on the board. Pennycook will replace Shipnuck Jan. 3, 1995.

As of Wednesday morning, Pennycook, received 15,271 of the votes (65.6 percent). She carried the race throughout Tuesday night with the percentages climbing in her favor.

The boundary lines for District 2 extends from the Santa Cruz border in North County to Prunedale, Castroville and Salinas over Los Laurels Grade to Carmel Valley and west to Monterey Bay and the Big Sur coastline.

Carmel Valley

Although the section of Carmel Valley within Pennycook's district is relatively small, one of her campaign pledges was to place valley residents in District 2 back into the 5th District with the majority of Carmel Valley voters.

Judy Pennycook was an easy winner.

"I will do my best to undo the redistricting boundaries that divide valley residents," Pennycook said Tuesday.

The new supervisor added she is committed to finding a solution to the crime problems in the county and "take back the neighborhoods."

Pennycook said she also intends to work to halt sea water intrusion and nitrate contamination in the Salinas Valley and move forward on replacing the county's antiquated transportation system.

"The campaign volunteers have been wonderful and diligent. Because of them, I'll be able to accomplish my goals. I look forward to being on the board."

Pennycook said she is not worried about coming on to a board where her predecessor, Shipnuck, and 5th District Supervisor Sam Karas publicly endorsed Jeffries.

"It basically came from a person who is highly politically motivated and that person is gone," Pennycook said of Shipnuck. "I've always worked well with Sam. We've had differences, but I will work to make sure we can achieve consensus."

No. 1: 42 of Mello's Senate bills become law

STATE SEN. Henry Mello, D-Watsonville, ranked first in the Senate in terms of the number of bills he introduced this legislative session that became law.

The veteran senator saw 42 measures bearing his name signed into law during the 1993-94 session.

Successful legislation included bills to:

- Create a Fort Ord Reuse Authority;
- Create jobs in Watsonville through tax incentives to attract businesses to the area;
- Shift local property tax revenues to libraries in Santa Cruz County in order to prevent their closure; and
- Create the 21st state university campus as CSU Monterey Bay on the site of the former Fort Ord Army Base.

City Talk

Town meeting set for Nov. 15; will feature department heads

By KEN WHITE

THE CITY of Carmel will be sponsoring another in its series of Town Hall meetings to communicate information and take comments from the public.

This gathering is scheduled for 7 p.m. on Tuesday, Nov. 15 in the Vista Lobos meeting room.

The upcoming meeting has been structured in a special way and promises to be informative and interesting. We have scheduled all city department directors to give a brief presentation about their department, current projects, goals and future projects, and to take comments or answer specific questions from the public.

This will be the first time in my memory that all the department directors have had an opportunity to tell you about their roll in city government. The city council is eagerly anticipating this evening as it will be an occasion for the public to hear a great deal about some of the daily workings of the various departments of our city.

Department directors scheduled to be present are:

- Jere Kersnar, city administrator
- Greg D'Ambrosio, asst city administrator
- Jeanne Brehmer, city clerk
- Jim Cullem, public works
- Brian Donoghue, community & cultural
- Don Fuselier, police
- Bill Hill, fire
- Gary Kelly, forest & beach
- Margaret Pelikan, library
- Jerry Pullem, personnel
- Brian Roseth, planning & building

Each of us attending the meeting also will be looking for new and positive ideas that we could implement. We hope you will be a part of it and take advantage of the opportunity to ask those who know the most about the daily workings of our village.

We hope to see you all there!

Ken White is the mayor of the City of Carmel.

CRA meeting scheduled for Nov. 17

Council to dump public interviews for planning commission candidates

trial or competition.

As the informal resolutions that came out of the retreat are not binding, a council majority came to the following other conclusions:

■ The city's five standing committees, which includes the planning commission, should be reduced from seven to five members each.

Smaller advisory bodies would lead to faster meetings, less paperwork and fewer appointments. After all, if the council can function well with only five members, why can't the planning commission or the forest and beach commission do the same?

There were some concerns, however. White was uncomfortable about reducing the number of people who participate in the local democracy, and Councilwoman Barbara Livingston believed — in the case of the planning commission, which meets twice monthly — it would be hard to get a quorum.

■ The regulations stipulating the membership of the planning commission are worth reconsidering.

Those regulations require the commission to consist of a certain number of architects, builders and other professionals in the construction and design fields.

City Administrator Jere Kersnar had suggested the "professional members" may exert an undue influence on fellow lay members. By consensus, council members agreed the regulations may be unnecessary or counterproductive. They argued the commission has enough professional guidance from city planning staff.

Arrest due in big Hog's Breath scam

By SCOTT BREARTON

A FORMER bookkeeper at the Hog's Breath Inn in downtown Carmel is under investigation for allegedly stealing approximately $40,000 from the business over a four-year period.

Carmel Police Sgt. Bill Uretsky said the female suspect – whose name is being withheld pending her arrest – used different formulas to embezzle money from the restaurant.

"With the help of the manager, Joyce Kutchins, we were able to figure out how the embezzlement occurred," Uretsky said.

The suspect has been "very cooperative," according to Uretsky. "We recovered documentation. When the former bookkeeper was confronted, she admitted to the theft."

In another matter, Carmel police have issued a Carmel Business Association (CBA) Alert for a couple who allegedly stole two small crystal boxes valued at $3,400 from a local business at about 3:45 p.m. last Sunday.

Rox Arcana – located near San Carlos and Sixth – was the targeted store.

"One would distract the store employee while the other would take the items," said Uretsky, noting the couple reportedly went into other Carmel businesses that afternoon and "acted suspiciously."

Police described the suspects as:

■ A white male adult in his mid-50s, about 5 feet 10 inches tall, with a slim build, collar-length "salt-and-pepper" gray hair and a heavy mustache.

■ A white female adult, 25 to 30 years old, about 5 feet 9 inches tall, with long, straight, dark hair. She has a mole on the left side of her face near her mouth, according to police.

Anyone with information about these individuals is asked to call the Carmel Police Department at 624-6403.

In another police matter, Lisa's Beauty Salon – located near San Carlos and Seventh – was reportedly burglarized at about 1 a.m. Thursday, Nov. 3.

"A resident who lives in the area came out and saw a man dressed in dark clothing standing in the shadows," Uretsky said. "She thought it was suspicious, but she never called us."

A television and stereo equipment valued at approximately $100 were taken during the burglary, according to Uretsky.

Council members eye new revenue sources

■ Marketing the Carmel-by-the-Sea ame with an eye toward making money for the city.

T-shirt sales from the First Murphy House? A trademark on the city name? Kersnar seemed almost contrite when he mentioned the idea, but there was some interest by the council — and some concern. "If you are picturing Carmel as a vast retail community, I don't like it," said Councilman Bob Fischer. "We have to remember we are a city."

Likewise, Councilwoman Barbara Livingston commented: "My concern is that we do not commercialize ourselves to death."

■ Improving Carmel's reputation as a "small conference center."

The hope here is to draw on a visitor demographic that may be an untapped revenue source. Sunset Center is the logical city building to house various small-scale conferences. Although extensive improvements to the center may need to be carried out before that particular dream comes true, only a minimal amount of coordination may be necessary among business leaders, local inns and the city.

■ Taking advantage of special fees and charges, such as paid-parking.

The irony here is that the pa.d-parking concept has come before the public and council in the past and failed to generate support.

Kersnar relayed the following conclusion, perhaps indicating a policy distinction for the 1990s: "People have the willingness to pay services if they use those particular services, but no one wants more general taxes, as in a utility tax."

Making a related point, Hazdovac said taxes are not the way for the city to meet its financial challenges in the years to come. The answer, she said, is improve revenue sources.

■ Putting more city services under private contract.

Fischer envisioned the city relinquishing its parking management and enforcement to a private entity as a way of increasing revenue, reducing costs and even improving the city's image.

■ Consolidating operations and functions.

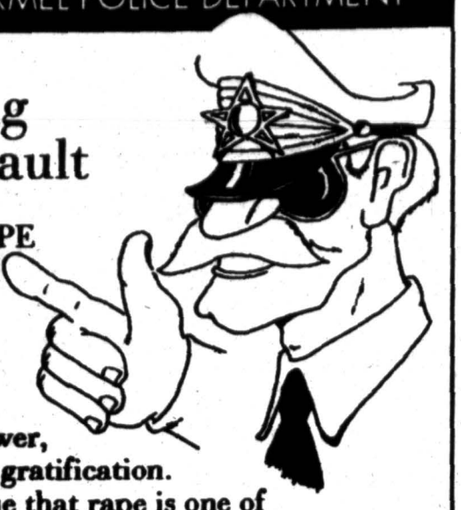
Staff training could be conducted jointly with other cities, and facilities could be shared. For example, Livingston said city recreation programs could operate out of Carmel Unified School District buildings, if the district is willing to cooperate.

Crime Tip

FROM THE CARMEL POLICE DEPARTMENT



Preventing sexual assault

ALTHOUGH RAPE is generally defined as forced sexual intercourse, most experts agree that the primary motivating factor is power, rather than sexual gratification. No one would argue that rape is one of the most serious crimes that can be committed upon another human being. The trauma a rape victim experiences is truly devastating, and the residual effects can last a lifetime.

While rape is difficult for many of us to think about (let alone discuss), in this day and age it must be dealt with.

We are truly fortunate here in Carmel-by-the-Sea, as this type of crime is very rare. But we must recognize that like all crime, we cannot consider ourselves completely immune. Below are some facts that are important for us all to consider.

- One out of every four women and one out of every six men will be sexually assaulted in their lifetime.
- Rape can happen to anyone — teens, grandmothers, babies, working women, boys, mothers and men.
- A rapist can be anyone — neighbor, classmate, delivery person, family member, stranger or trusted friend.
- Rapists look for available, vulnerable targets. The age of the victim or how they're dressed do not matter.
- Date and/or acquaintance rape accounts for over 50 percent of all rapes.

Some prevention tips

Be aware of what's happening around you. Trust your instincts. If you feel something isn't right or your don't feel safe, get out of the area or situation and call the police.

Indoors

- Make sure all doors and windows have strong locks and use them.
- Keep entrances well lighted. A peephole in the door is a good safety measure.
- Never open your door to a stranger. If someone says they need to make an emergency call, make the call yourself while they wait outside.
- If you find a door or window open or broken when you come home, don't go inside. Call the police from a neighbor's house.

Outdoors

- Avoid walking or jogging alone, especially at night. Stay in well traveled, well lighted areas.
- Be careful of anyone in a car who asks for directions — if you answer, keep your distance so you can't be pulled into the car.
- Have your keys ready before you reach the door of your home, work or car. Fumbling in your purse with your head down leaves you vulnerable.

Car sense

- Always lock your car — when you get in and when you get out. Look in the back seat before getting in.
- Park in areas that will be well lighted and well traveled when you return to your car. If this was not possible when you first parked, arrange to move your car before darkness falls.
- If your car breaks down, lift the hood, get back inside, lock your doors and turn on your flashing lights. If someone stops to offer help, roll the windows down slightly and ask the person to call the police.

Again, the crime of rape is extremely rare in our community, but it is important for us to remember that crime can and does happen here.

CRIME TIP is written by Detective Sgt. Pete Poitras of the Carmel Police Department, and the space is provided free as a community service message by The Carmel Pine Cone.

YOU CANNOT EVALUATE A MEDICINE BY ITS LOOKS

JOHN S. MOWRY PHARMACIST

This is why so many doctors still prefer to prescribe products made by the manufacturers whose reputation they are closely familiar with rather than those made by a company that has copied a formula after it has been proven successful.

Like copies of anything, from medicines to famous art, some reproductions are very faithful to the original. But also like art, with medicines, you often can't tell which is which just by looking. Your doctor insures you getting what he wants you to have by exactly specifying a product in which he has confidence.

Sandy's Antiques reflects CV's past

Sandy's Antiques owner Sandra Clough has created an ambiance of warmth and charm at her new shop in Carmel Valley Village.

■ Business Profile: Where there's Smoke, there's Dusty, too.

By SUSAN BECK

IT'S NOT uncommon to find Sandra Clough and her customers sipping sarsaparillas while talking about antiques and local history.

Clough treats everyone who steps through the old, screened door of Sandy's Antiques at Rosie's Cracker Barrel in Carmel Valley Village as though they were a special guest in her home.

"I take care of my customers the way I like to be treated," said Clough, who opened her shop in July. "I like to have quiet time to browse and enjoy."

While browsing through Sandy's Antiques, one can't help but notice Smoke and Dusty, two African Gray red-tailed parrots comfortably perched outside their cage, or the giant jar of dill pickles. The ambiance suggests old-time Carmel Valley.

Clough's shop features Western and Native American art, along with a wide range of eclectic Americana collectibles.

Two prized works of art hanging on the whitewashed walls of the rustic shop are "The Honey Eater Band" and "Custer and Sitting Bull" by Simon Nava.

And as the lure of the American cowboy has heightened in recent years, Clough also keeps a collection of Joe Mora's recently reissued books at her shop. Mora lived on the Monterey Peninsula before his death in 1947.

natives, violates the California Coastal Act and was approved prematurely, that is, before regulatory agency approvals have been obtained.

"One of the reasons I stepped in was because other opponents of the project haven't gotten it together," Mapstead said, referring to Native American groups, Cachagua residents and various environmentalists, including the Sierra Club.

Mapstead said many legal fees are being waived because he has filed in forma pauperis, that is, as a person without means.

He said correspondence from superior court indicated the litigation will reach the courtroom in May.

In the interim, he plans to seek pro bono legal assistance.

Hughes did comment that legal challenges do not come as a surprise to the district.

competitions.

Another function CHS students avoid like a calculus class is the ever-popular school dance. Now I've been to a few, and frankly I can understand people's aversion to these weird time warps back to a middle school mentality.

The music, a major part of the dance's success, is this terrible techno hip-hop that just doesn't get a bunch of Grateful Dead shirt-wearing, long-haired, apathetic guitar players to party down.

At last spring's prom, the DJ walked in and walked out, leaving us to make do with old-mix tapes and the hokey pokey. Sadie Hawkins was almost a complete disaster last year as only four girls bought bids just before the dance.

Simply too cool?

Why are CHS students lacking so much luster? Are we too cool to show some support for our school, or do our school functions just lack creativity? Personally, I am not qualified to answer that question. It's a paradox that need only be pondered by physics teachers and those who know the meaning of the word pep.

However, I must hand it to the Governing Student Council for this year's spirit week and homecoming plans. Instead of having the traditional parade on Saturday morning — when most students are watching cartoons — it's taking place today after school.

The parade will be followed by a Powder Puff football game, where junior and senior girls get to throw around some pigskin while the guys cheers them on in high-pitched female voices.

Then, tonight, there's going to be a barbecue, a night rally and a bonfire on the track with the popular local band "Nectar of the Gods" providing live music.

This actually sounds quite interesting to me, and I will probably even miss Seinfeld to check out the scene. All in all, many students appreciate that the GSC is finally trying to appeal to wider spectrum of students.

The big question still remains: Will students of Apathy High voluntarily return to school and join in on the festivities? Judging from the turnout at last weekend's 24-hour Relay Challenge and the basic lack of other things to do in Carmel, it is my guess students will stop by.

But don't expect too much from us too soon — like, for instance, any indication that we're having fun.

I'm glad they gave me a flag to wave.

It is hard to imagine what it would be like to live in a country without freedom...without the right to wave a flag...assemble peaceably or speak our minds. Thanks to our nation's veterans, our freedom has been protected, but not without a price.

When called to serve, they left home and family for remote and desolate places. They put their lives on the line to preserve our precious heritage and freedom, and the freedom of countless other nations.

American veterans are special.

On this Veterans Day, 1994, we join The American Legion in paying tribute to the men and women who have honored our nation with service, sacrifice, and allegiance.

Doris Day's Best Friends

By DORIS DAY

The importance of being healthy

ROUTINE PHYSICAL exams are critical to our pets' health and well-being, particularly because they can't tell us how they feel.

As part of your pet's annual (or semi-annual) visit, your veterinarian will routinely check its general physical condition, including eyes, ears, nose, lungs and heart.

It's also important to check the feet to be sure that toenails are the proper length and that the pads of the feet are in good shape. If your pet has long, feathery hair, it may need to be clipped between the toes to prevent matting and, unless your pet is groomed regularly, this is a good time to have this looked at. Without proper care, the hair can form a hard lump that will be painful and cause your pet to limp, so be sure to check the feet.

Pay attention to your pet's stool. If there are changes in the color or consistency, it's time to alert your vet. Always take a fresh stool sample in a glass jar or plastic baggie when your pet has its checkup.

Does your dog scoot around the floor or bite at his posterior? Its anal glands may need to be cleaned.

If you've noticed any changes in your pet's habits or behavior, no matter how insignificant, talk it over with the doctor. An increased thirst, for instance, may be a sign of disease and not just the result of a warm day.

An older pet experiences normal age-related changes in vision and hearing, but it also is more susceptible to diseases such as cancer, arthritis and heart and kidney problems. These can often be treated if they're diagnosed early, so it's especially important to observe your pet for clues to its state of health. Physical exams are more thorough with an aging pet and may include the following:

- A complete blood count can help in the diagnosis of bacterial and viral infections, anemia and clotting problems.
- A urinalysis gives an indication of how the kidneys are functioning and also serves as an all-purpose screening for systemic diseases.
- An EKG can help your veterinarian assess your pet's heartbeat and detect any irregular, slow or weak heartbeats.
- X-rays can help uncover changes such as enlargements or reductions in organ size, accumulation of fluid, presence of tumors, arthritic changes in joints and the presence of bladder stones.
- Consultation about a diet that meets your pet's changing nutritional needs also is an important part of any thorough checkup.
- In addition to the physical exam and appropriate lab tests, your pet's basic health care program should include vaccinations and annual dentistry.

For a happy, healthy Best Friend, preventive health care is the best medicine!

See you next week!

Where There's a Will...

By THOMAS HART HAWLEY

Test your probate IQ

IN A RECENT survey average Americans were given the following multiple choice test:

"Probate is:

a. A really yucky toxin.

b. A sexually transmitted disease.

c. The judicial process for the orderly distribution of an estate."

A majority of respondents guessed wrong and no wonder. You no doubt have heard probate talked about as if it were the fifth horseman of the Apocalypse. Yet, if you're like most people, you probably don't have much of an idea just what probate is.

For starters, the following property does not have to be probated:

a. Property held in joint tenancy.

b. Life insurance proceeds (unless you named your probate estate as the beneficiary).

c. Assets, such as retirement accounts (like IRAs) and government bonds, that are payable on death to a person you name.

d. All assets passing outright from one spouse to another.

e. Assets held in a living trust.

What's it all about

The rest of your property is subject to probate. Let's take a short stroll through probate to see what it's really all about.

A probate proceeding is started by the person you named in your will as your representative. If you didn't ever get around to making a will, just about anybody can start the proceeding — even one of your creditors — but preference is given to your spouse and your relatives.

The person seeking to be your representative files a Petition for Probate in Superior Court. He or she then publishes a Notice of Petition to Administer Estate in a local newspaper, which informs your creditors that they must file their claims, and sets the date for the first hearing. This notice also must be sent to all the beneficiaries named in your will as well as your next of kin.

At the first hearing, the judge appoints the person who will have the responsibility of managing your estate. This person is called an executor if he was named in your will, or an administrator if you died without a will. (If the person is a she and you are either a Latin scholar or a snob, she is called an executrix or an administratrix). The term "personal representative" covers both.

Unless there is a challenge to your will, the judge will admit your will to probate and order letters of administration issued to your personal representative. These letters are your representative's written authority to act for the estate. Your creditors have four months from the date these letters are issued to file a claim against your estate for money due or they will be out of luck.

This absolute cut-off of creditors' claims is an important benefit of probate. For example, if you are a doctor, lawyer or other professional, malpractice claims that are not filed on time are forever barred. Moreover, your representative can choose to probate both halves of the community property, thus protecting all community property, such as the family residence, from future claims.

Just what exactly does your representative do to probate your estate? You'll have to wait until next time (our Thanksgiving eve issue) to find out.

Plumber's wife

Sandy's Antiques takes up two-thirds of Stew's Plumbing, the business her husband, Stewart, has operated for the past decade.

"When we go out people always say, 'Hi, Stew," Clough noted. "I wanted my own identity. I'm a shy person, but having my own shop has helped me to be more outgoing. Everyone has been just wonderful."

When a customer is interested in one of Clough's antiques, such as the dainty wrought-iron chair with a petit point cushion, or the unique Windsor arm chair, she enjoys telling them about how the piece weaves into local history.

"I spend a lot of time with customers," said Clough, who has scheduled a holiday sale on Dec. 10. "I buy things I like, and each piece is very special. I like to find the right home for it."

In Sandy's Antiques first four months, business has been very good, said Clough, who welcomes anyone who has something to sell to contact her at the shop.

"I get a lot of people coming out to the village for the weekend, or just for the afternoon," she said.

"Even before I opened my shop, people would stop in thinking it was an antique shop because we had so many artifacts mixed in with Stew's plumbing supplies. Now it is."

Doubletree Hotel finalizes plans for renovation

THE DOUBLETREE Hotel in downtown Monterey has redesigned its hotel restaurant, updated its rooftop lounge and finalized plans for a multi-million dollar room renovation scheduled to begin in December.

The changes result from the recent merger between the Phoenix-based Doubletree Hotels Corp. and the Boston-based Guest Quarters Hotels Partnership.

"What that means is we're operating from an even stronger base than before," said Bob DeVoe, general manager.

"We also have expanded breadth with hotels in 72 cities and 31 states nationwide."

The Monterey Doubletree expanded its hotel restaurant to a steakhouse, and opened the Brasstree Lounge seven nights a week and dropped the cover charge.

"We're also in the process of returning the Brasstree format to live music five nights a week," DeVoe said.

The restaurant, now named the Plazatree Broiler, retained the soup-and-salad bar and the commitment to offering local produce on the menu.

The switch to steaks, DeVoe noted, was driven by the lack of steakhouses on the Monterey Peninsula.

The $2.5 million guestroom renovation will begin at year-end.

Effort to curb federal deficit spending have led some to target "entitlement" programs. Outlays for such programs are based not on appropriation levels determined by Congress, but on the number of people who qualify and are "entitled" to payments under various programs. This interpretation shouldn't apply to Social Security and Medicare, say older citizens who fear that budget cutters will target these programs as well as other "entitlements." Seniors point out that they paid up front for these programs through money withheld from wages or salaries.

CCS berth at stake as RLS, Alisal tangle

It's crunch time! Stevenson's Turie Cavaliere(76) and an obscured teammate apply a big hit on Gonzales' Ritchie Florez (30) during a kickoff return midway in the second quarter of Saturday's game in Pebble Beach. Junior Chris Orosco (37, at left) picked up the loose ball and raced 15 yards untouched for a touchdown in RLS' 42-12 romp.

■ Pirates must prevail to have a chance at playoffs, while the Trojans control their destiny.

By BROOKS FOSTER

THE 1994 Robert Louis Stevenson varsity football team regular season is coming to an exciting close.

With one Mission Trail Athletic League opponent left on their schedule, the Pirates could come away from Friday night's crucial 8 p.m. game at Alisal as a Central Coast Section playoff team for the second consecutive season. But if Stevenson loses to the Trojans, who are 6-3 overall and 3-2 in the MTAL, its season, which has showed such promise over the past three weeks, would come to an end. An Alisal victory would automatically send it to the playoffs as the MTAL's second representative behind undefeated Palma.

After its 42-12 victory over Gonzales last Saturday at Alumni Field in Pebble Beach, the Pirates, 5-4 overall and 3-2 in the MTAL, have now chalked up three straight league wins and outscored their opponents by an average score of 45-16. And if RLS is to ensure itself of a berth in the CCS playoffs, it could use a little help from Gonzales, which plays Friday night at rival King City.

If RLS and King City win Friday night, both teams would be 4-2 but the Mustangs would automatically

Can Padres stop Alvernaz? PG back holds key to game

■ Breaker star scored 5 TDs in win over Alisal.

By DOUG THOMPSON

IF THE Carmel High School varsity football team is going to keep possession of "The Shoe," then it had better be able to knock Steve Alvernaz off his feet.

Easier said than done.

When the Padres and Pacific Grove Breakers meet at 2 p.m. Saturday at Bardarson Field in the spirited rivalry, there won't be any Central Coast Section playoff berth at stake. But possession of "The Shoe" is on the line and that's plenty of incentive for these two teams who have struggled through tough Mission Trail Athletic League campaigns.

Carmel takes a 2-6 overall mark and an 0-5 MTAL record into the game; PG is 2-7 and 1-4. But the Breakers' one MTAL win came last Friday night in PG's 32-31 upset of Alisal.

When the night was over, Alvernaz, PG's sterling senior, had scored five touchdowns, including an 88-yard kickoff return that iced the game, and amassed 145 yards on the ground. So just where has Carmel's defense had trouble all season?

"Stopping the run," lamented CHS head coach Craig Johnston. "Alvernaz is big and strong, and faster than you think. He hits those holes fast."

At 6-1, 210 pounds, PG coach Tom Bristol likes what he sees in his back, who doubles on defense as a linebacker.

Battle for 'The Shoe'

"He's just a big strong player," said Bristol, who is in his fourth year at the helm of the Breakers. "He has a lot of heart and plays with a lot of intensity."

Bristol said last week's victory over Alisal was sweet redemption for his team, which had played several opponents tough only to fall at the end.

"The win meant a lot for us. It left us all with a really good feeling."

That was last week. When you ask Bristol about last year and the battle for "The Shoe," his tone changes.

"It looked like we had last year's game wrapped up," said Bristol, who watched his team commit a costly turnover which resulted in a late Carmel score and an 18-13 Padre victory. "It wasn't a fun year."

But Bristol and his troops have had plenty of time to think about Saturday's contest against a Carmel team, which enjoyed a bye last week.

"I think it's an advantage for us,"

Spikers gear up for post-season

Bradley-Colker team take No. 1 seed into CCS

THIS WEEK marked the end of the regular season for fall sports at Robert Louis Stevenson. As the first trimester winds down, most Stevenson athletes now look forward to final exams and the approaching winter sports, while a few others prepare for post-season action.

Here's a wrapup:

■ VOLLEYBALL

In a matchup that provided for probably the most exciting volleyball in RLS history, the third-place Pirates squared off against Mission Trail Athletic League-leading Gonzales on Thursday, Nov. 3. Stevenson offered exceptional competition for the disciplined Spartan girls before falling 15-5, 6-15, 17-19, 15-12, 15-5.

The highlight of the match was the third game, which RLS pulled out 19-17. The marathon game featured a heavy exchange of solid spiking and exceptional saves. Senior setter Risa Goldstein and junior Rebecca Sampson paced the Pirates with hard kills, while senior Rhea Kelly provided for dependable defense, returning nearly every ball hit her way.

In spite of the loss, the Pirates, 9-5, nevertheless earned a berth in the Central Coast Coast Section volleyball championships. But as the No. 8 seed, they will face top seed Half Moon Bay at 4 p.m. Saturday at Milpitas.

— J.D.

■ GIRLS TENNIS

With the regular season already completed last week, the RLS girls were represented by their top three players in the MTAL Championships on Thursday, Nov. 3. Senior Lindsay Colker was the singles entry for the Pirates, while her sister, Jayme, a sophomore, and freshman Jasmine Bradley teamed up to take on opposing doubles teams.

Colker put away her first two opponents to reach the finals, but lost in straight sets to Santa Catalina's star No. 1 player Lisa Walgenbach, 6-4-6-2. Colker finished in second place.

The Bradley-Colker duo coasted to an easy first-place finish, and lost only eight games in three two-set matches. The Pirate girls teamed for a convincing 6-1, 6-1 victory in the finals and are seeded as the No. 1 doubles team entering the CCS championships, which got underway Wednesday with a home match against Saratoga.

— J.D.

■ WATER POLO

After a disappointing start, the Pirates neared the end of their fall slate showing major improvement. Now 4-9 in league play after a 19-7 loss against front-running Live Oak, RLS has matured immensely since the start of the season.

In a recent convincing victory over Gilroy, coach Erik Keller had a chance to shift around his players quite a bit. As a result of the experiment, everyone on the team scored at least one goal — even goalie Sonny Irvine. He was delighted to be on the opposite end of a shot, but admits he was a little clueless away from his beloved cage.

Junior diver Antuzzi, freshman runner Allen sparkle

Padre Sports Scene

By AMIR MASLIYAH

THE CARMEL High School girls swimming and diving team rounded out its respective regular seasons in a big way last week at the Mission Trail Athletic League Championships.

In diving, the Padres' Amy Antuzzi captured first place, finishing 12 points ahead of her closest competitor. Fellow juniors Tara Berlin and Summer Auguston finished fifth and ninth, respectively, to help bring home a second place finish in league for the Padres.

The swimming team followed the example set by the divers as it posted a silver medal in the championships held at Pacific Grove High on Wednesday, Nov. 2. The Padres took second place by just two points with a balanced team performance and are looking to send a handful of swimmers to the Central Coast Section playoffs.

Morgan Wilson remained the only individual swimmer to qualify in the 100 freestyle but fellow Pine Cone columnist Celeste Evans as well as Lauren Picard, Lauren Greenburg, Arlyne "Speedy" Petalver, Sara Holine and Morgan Wilson all qualified to compete to various relays.

The CCS Championships will take place Friday and Saturday at the Santa Clara Swim Center. The finals will be on Saturday, with the diving at 9 a.m. and the swimming at 1 p.m.

■ CROSS COUNTRY

CHS freshman Molly Allen proved to be the big hero as the cross country team wrapped up its regular season last Thursday at the MTAL Championships at Toro Park.

Allen dusted all competitors by covering the three-mile course in 21:51 to pace the girls squad to a second-place finish in league, which qualified it for CCS post-season action on Saturday in Crystal Springs. The girls finished only three points behind league champion York in the Nov. 3 meet.

Denise Cardimone once again demonstrated her consistency by turning in an impressive seventh-place finish. According to Coach John Ables, his team enjoys running hilly courses and it showed as the Padre girls tore up the Toro Park course.

The girls will continue to run this week in preparation for the upcoming CCS run.

The boys' team did not fare as well in the MTAL meet and saw its season come to an end.

■ GIRLS TENNIS

The Padres ended their season with a winning record and in third place in the MTAL.

In last Friday's MTAL Championships at Chamisal Tennis Club, Shannon Dougherty took the consolation prize in singles action, while Corrina Tulua and Jessica Kattan represented CHS in doubles play.

■ WATER POLO

Carmel added two more wins to its already lofty record before falling Tuesday to Hollister 16-15 in a match at the Padre pool. The loss left CHS at 24-10 overall and 11-3 in league.

The two recent victories were 7-2 over Robert Louis Stevenson and 14-8 over Salinas.

Barring a loss by front-runner Live Oak this week, Carmel will finish in second place behind the Acorns, 10-1. Live Oak absorbed its lone loss in the Padre pool on Oct. 27.

The Padres continue action in Saturday's league championships that begin at 9:30 a.m. at Gilroy High. CCS championship action is slated for the following week.

■ VOLLEYBALL

After an up-and-down season, the Padres finished off on a high note.

"Our whole team played well — this is the best we've played all season," said first-year coach Dane Riggenbach after a hard-fought setback against King City, 12-2. Carmel stunned the Mustangs by taking the match's first game.

Carmel, 4-10 in league, will not advance to post-season action, but showed flashes of brilliance throughout the year.

After rout of Gonzales, Pirates brace for big game with Alisal advance by virtue of its 31-21 win over the Pirates on Oct. 14. Stevenson would then have to hope for an at-large berth in order to make the CCS lineup, which is a possibility.

To go anywhere, however, the Pirates must first defeat Alisal, a team that started the season at 6-0 before losing its last three straight, including being upset 32-31 last Friday night at Pacific Grove. This game, however, marks the return of one of the league's star, running back Mark Zapata who has been sidelined with an injury.

"If everything comes together — as it did against Gonzales, we should win," said RLS head coach Jeff Young. "But I expect the score to be close."

And things definitely came together for the Pirates last Saturday. Despite having fewer total yards than Gonzales, they racked up a 30-point win.

On the prowl...again

Senior running back Mike Prowell is ending his season in spectacular fashion as he scored three more touchdowns to boost his season total to 21 — more than any other Stevenson player in history. He blazed to 145 yards on just 19 carries.

"This year's team is a remarkable group," Young said. "They are extremely quick thinkers and coach themselves on the field. When Gonzales threw unexpected plays at us, they knew exactly how to react. It was very encouraging."

The Stevenson players have certainly not become complacent after turning their season around with three consecutive romps.

"We're working harder than ever to finish the season on the right note," said senior co-captain Laith Agha, who turned in a stirring 85-yard kickoff return for a touchdown at the outset of the second quarter Saturday.

The Pirates' Brandon Sams turns the corner and has some daylight during Saturday's win over Gonzales.

Another co-captain, Sekou Sanyika, said after the win: "From the field, the play was very tough. It was a much closer game than the score might indicate." Sanyika had a touchdown of his own when he and RLS senior quarterback Vinnie Balestreri hooked up on a 31-year aerial in the third quarter.

For the Pirates, everything will be on the line at Alisal on Friday night.

"Alisal uses a lot of motion in their offense and can score often on big plays, but they also have given up a lot of points on defense," said assistant coach Dave Miller.

So expect a shootout Friday night with all guns blazing.

Padres, PG put pride on the line as schools renew spirited rivalry said Johnston, who last saw his team play Oct. 28 at Gonzales. "We needed some rest. We lifted some extra weights and had plenty of time to watch film of PG."

Besides Alvernaz, Johnston and his staff witnessed a vastly improving Cameron Miller at quarterback for the Breakers. Wide receiver Carey Lanzman and tight end Craig Chandler are two more key cogs in PG's explosive offense.

"They're going to score," Johnston observed. "It's just a matter of whether we'll be able to outscore them. It's the last game for all the seniors and we're going to have to get a big day from them. Those are the guys who will be counted upon to make the big plays."

More specifically, that's players like quarterback John Geisler and wide receiver Dustin Nagai, to name just two. Bristol is all too wary of the Padres' tandem.

"They're going to create a lot of problems for us," he said.

When it comes to the shootout for "The Shoe," anything can happen. And, as Bristol found out last season, all too often anything will happen.

"Some extremely tough games are just around the corner," said senior Cameron Sheldon, referring to the upcoming league championships.

The name of the game for RLS this season has been defense.

"Our defense at the beginning of the season was horrible," Keller said, "but I've been slowly coaxing the animals out of my players. Whereas they used to play only one or two quarters of good defense, they have become consistent through three or four."

Library friends near and far

Dear Editor:

Cordial thanks are long due to The Carmel Pine Cone for the warm, enthusiastic front-page feature in advance of the 1994 campaign for Carmel Public Library Foundation.

Even before the campaign mailings went forth, devotees of the library began to send in contributions, including those from visiting readers who reside as far away as Redding. It is heartwarming to learn how extensive the family of readers actually is, reaching out to many states and many counties distant from our own.

Surely it is the recognition that our library, among others, has suffered severe cuts in budget allowances. If we are to continue serving all our long-time readers, if we are to continue meeting the needs of both the young and the elderly, continue the story hours and the outreach to the homebound, we must appeal to the understanding generosity of all our readers who faithfully have given contributions in the past.

And to the Carmel Residents Association: Warmest thanks for the festive party on Oct. 21 at All Saints' Church Hall for the benefit of the library campaign.

The pleasure of the company of Charles Schulz would have in itself guaranteed a successful event, but the generosity of the artists and writers who gave gifts for the auction, as well as the lavish donations of food and wine all contributed to a handsome increase in the funds accruing for our 1994 campaign for the Foundation.

To you all, to the CRA, and to new contributors, sincerest thanks from the board of directors and all committees involved in this campaign.

Kudos to paper's social duo

Dear Editor:

It is always nice to keep abreast of what is happening in our community's social circles, which are always filled with many wonderful events. And I would like you to know how much more I enjoy reading The Pine Cone's "Social Spotlight," which is written by Dodie Barkley.

Dodie's style of writing is terrific. As an occasional fellow writer, I truly appreciate her words and manner of expression. She turns any topic into an interesting and intriguing adventure in the literary world.

Not to be forgotten, as well, is social photographer Chuck Scardina, who is always so very pleasant to be around. I believe it goes without saying, too, that we all appreciate his wonderful photographs each week.

These two members of your staff make a fantastic team, and together a great addition to your newspaper.

A matter of motion sickness?

Dear Editor:

Carmel may have mistakenly found a city administrator and/or staff unable to cope with the uniqueness that sets Carmel apart and makes it the holiday destination of people worldwide.

Six months ago Councilman Bob Fisher made a motion to "find a way to buy the remaining four lots in Pescadero Canyon," thus keeping the green belt open space on Carmel's northern border. The motion included looking at all of the city's holdings to determine priorities on which properties could be sold to raise money in order to offset the purchase of canyon lots. The motion passed unanimously.

This month the staff delivered their report. Jere Kersnar, city administrator, detailed a census of the city's holdings. He said he felt some of the city's land should be sold and that proceeds from the sale be used to bring down the city's debt, not for purchasing Pescadero Canyon.

Speaker Karen Ferlito hit it on the head when she commented that "there are many cities with nice streets, plenty of parking, and a fine bottom line where we in Carmel wouldn't choose to live." It is the uniqueness of our village we must protect and sometimes that effort takes the form of tax dollars.

The motion was: "Buy the lots in Pescadero Canyon and list which present properties we should consider selling."

Did the staff decide which properties should be put up for sale? Did it determine how much Pescadero Canyon would cost? Did it contact canyon property owners to see what they wanted for their lots? Landowners Kermit Darius and Tim Mallery told the council that "no one has asked us what we would sell for."

When the employees tell the bosses what to do without following their instructions, it makes us wonder who is in charge. If the financial bottom line is the only criteria that staff is able to address, there may be other municipalities more suited to their abilities.

Old Monterey responds

Dear Editor:

What a pleasant surprise to find the Oct. 27 issue of The Pine Cone carrying a front page article on Old Monterey.

Thank you so much for your time and effort in producing this most welcome journalism. The merchants and businesses appreciate the positive approach in which you addressed our downtown community.

How astute of you to notice the many changes in our district. We look forward to carrying the momentum and spreading the progress.

I sincerely want to thank The Pine Cone and reporter Scott Brearton for the articles and the boost they gave in building the downtown's team spirit!

The good judge

Dear Editor:

Addendum for the good article in the Oct. 20 issue of The Pine Cone: Judge Gordon Campbell also served on the Carmel Unified School District (CUSD) Board of Education for a number of years. He was responsible for, among many of her good things, having planted the long row of cypress trees as a wind break at the west end of the Middle School property when that school was being built. The trees are now serving in this capacity and beautifully so. I always think of them as Campbell Grove.

He often managed legal aspects of school business. One day while typing a contract he had prepared, my secretary began laughing. I asked why. She quoted the end: "This contract shall last forever, or until the end of the world and one day." I suppose this is a standard legal gimmick, but Judge Campbell did like to nail things down.

Why we should take time Friday to honor veterans

By WILLIAM M. DETWEILER

WHY DO we celebrate Veterans Day? What of the men and women who donned their country's uniform, left job, home and family, and placed themselves in harm's way for the sake of their nation?

Gen. Douglas MacArthur described America's citizen-soldier as "one of the world's noblest figures."

Recalling two world wars, MacArthur said: "In memory's eye I could see those staggering columns of the First World War, bending under soggy packs on many a weary march, from dripping dusk to drizzling dawn, slogging ankle deep through the mire of shell-pocked roads; to form grimly for the attack, blue-lipped, covered with sludge and mud, chilled by the wind and rain, driving home to their objective, and, for many, to the judgment seat of God."

Author James Brady, a Marine during the Korean War, has written this about his experiences:

"We stayed on the line once through January and February for 46 days. Never washed, never changed clothes, and we ate from tin cans. No fresh fruit, no milk, no bread.

"And you try to keep it hanging together when a friend of yours is killed or loses an eye or his hands and try to forget what dead men look like hanging on barbed wire in the morning after you have fought again through the night."

Here's how Marsha Young, a Desert Storm veteran, described her experiences in a recent letter to The American Legion Magazine:

"The monsoon rains flooded us, the Scuds attacked us and the locals harassed the American women. Water made our chemical suits ineffective against any agents in the Scud warheads. We had no showers for 11 days. With water and toilet paper rationing, constant sand storms, 100-plus degree weather, no tampons, no laundry, Scud attacks and sniper fire, I, too, became the animal within.

"My utmost respect goes to the combat veterans whatever the war, whatever the gender..."

Why do we celebrate Veterans Day? Because veterans have given us the freedom to do so.

William M. Detweiler is national commander of the 3.1 million-member American Legion.

Carmel Commentary

By BARBARA LIVINGSTON

We must not succumb to factory outlet mentality in village's never-ending quest to maintain character

HOW CAN we protect the economic viability of Carmel and yet maintain our village character?

This is a question I have been grappling with for years, and was one which I posed to all Carmel Planning Commission applicants at recent interviews by the city council.

Pope Coleman, one of two new commission members, responded: "The economic viability is dependent upon the village character." This response immediately struck a cord with me. How true it is that Carmel needs business, but the converse is equally true that business needs Carmel.

Because of its great beauty — both natural and built — Carmel has been a continuing attraction for people from California, the nation and the world.

However, if our village ambiance begins to fade, if we succumb to the discount/factory outlet mentality, and if we relax our vigilance relative to our longstanding city policies and ordinances designed to preserve our special character, then we will lose the individuality which residents, property owners and visitors have cherished since Carmel's founding.

As Carmelite Sharon Hughes de Zorda likes to say: "With rules and regulations there is freedom." It's an interesting perspective!

Bay Area example

The City of San Francisco last year revised its building codes to reflect the concerns of both residents and developers who felt that San Francisco ordinances and procedures were not strict enough or clear enough. As a result, policies were significantly strengthened and experienced developers were quick to accept the new code changes as an improvement — more restrictive than ever, but at least more clear and consistent.

Over the months I have seen Jon Erlandson, a local architect, going in and out of our planning department. When I asked if the frequency of his visits indicated permit problems, his answer was very revealing. "Not at all. I never have a problem with (the planning department) because I know what is expected and required, and I stay within those guidelines. If you follow the rules, there is no problem."

Without policies and programs to protect our natural and man-made environment, property owners and residents could drastically and irrevocably alter the look of our beautiful village without public review and comment.

The charming facades of our downtown could be replaced with enormous plate glass windows, excessive lighting, loss of landscaping, gold leaf lettering in place of hand-carved signs. Think it can't happen here? Take a look at some of the newer chain stores in town. As you look at them ask yourself: "Do these look like Carmel? Are we in Carmel?"

I don't think so.

Our obligation...

Changes happen slowly and incrementally until finally there is nothing left to tell us that we are in a village anymore. There is no sense of place — no sense of geography. My point is, as Ellen Goodman has written, that we need to "think of ourselves with a sense of place and an obligation to take care of that space."

If we heed this advice, our source of income from visitors, home buyers and retirees, who cherish our small-town character and clean environment, will continue to flow into our economy. To protect ourselves against over-commercialization, we need to continue to look to and support the policies and programs of our Carmel General Plan.

I look forward to having the city, with the cooperation of the business community, develop commercial design guidelines that will strengthen the economic viability of our village and also protect its fragile character.

As a business person, I can understand how this will work to the great and good benefit of all. Our residential design guidelines work well for our neighborhoods, and protect our residential areas from being overdeveloped with excessive site coverage, excessive use of asphalt, loss of public and private trees and landscaping and over-illumination of exterior spaces.

Just as our residential guidelines work to protect our village, so, too, will the new guidelines for the business community be similarly beneficial.

Today, with the great influx of so many new property owners and residents from large urban areas, perhaps there is a need for greater public information. It could be provided in the form of a brochure which would discuss community programs, resources and policies. It would be disseminated to all residents and property owners — given out, as Shirley Humann suggests, as a condition of escrow. It would be handed out by the Carmel Business Association and the board of Realtors and made available at planning and forestry departments.

Our city does not try to impose its policies in an arbitrary or difficult manner. Many believe, as I do, the reason our village continues to thrive and attract visitors and residents, and even continues to succeed in difficult economic times, is because we have maintained our quality of life and our individuality.

— Barbara Livingston

Examples in the Sierra

We have just returned from a trip to the Sierra to view the gorgeous fall colors, and have had an opportunity to revisit villages and towns very dear to us. Some have managed to maintain their historic charm and individuality. Others have become blurred and unrecognizable images which no longer attract our attention, or our checkbook.

Quality development is what we should seek and cultivate for Carmel-by-the-Sea. We have been known for this for years. More recently, quality has slipped and mall-type designs and merchandising have begun to creep into the village. We all recognize the results of lax enforcement, of poor land use decisions, of perfunctory guidelines. The evidence is all around us wherever we travel.

Our city does not try to impose its policies in an arbitrary or difficult manner. Many believe, as I do, the reason our village continues to thrive and attract visitors and residents, and even continues to succeed in difficult economic times, is because we have maintained our quality of life and our individuality. We want business to grow, prosper and succeed, but we should not sacrifice our quality or lower our standards.

Optimistic about future

I remain very optimistic for the future of Carmel. Visitors and residents, I believe, will continue to seek refuge from the pollution, noise, traffic and crime of their sterile urban environment and will be attracted to Carmel-by-the-Sea by the serenity and natural beauty of our village.

Community policies and programs have withstood the test of time, and have been embraced by city councils of very diverse philosophies.

These core values are what hold our community together. There has been, and will continue to be, consensus on these broad philosophical points regardless of our differences of approach.

Barbara Livingston, who grew up in the village and attended Carmel schools, has been a Carmel city councilwoman since 1992.

Farr survives, manages to buck national trend

despite Farr's advantages of demographics. Farr came out on top, and "I was very excited about that."

But, by the time the returns were pouring in early Wednesday, the news was grim in almost every other way for Farr: At least 232 Republican representatives would dominate the House; 53 in the Senate.

"It was sad to see so many dedicated, hard-working people who have served this country being sent home," Farr said. "I am going to go back to Washington as a member of the minority party."

Farr earned 76,521 votes to McCampbell's 66,537. Green Party candidate Craig Coffin received 4,903.

Meanwhile, McCampbell told The Pine Cone Wednesday afternoon he would not make another attempt for the office. "From my point of view, we did everything we could in this campaign," McCampbell said.

Farr underplayed the reality of turncoat Democrats voting within three counties to support McCampell in good enough numbers to make the race competitive. "I don't think it was that close when you consider the national trend."

But to say it could have been worse doesn't mean it was not bad. During the campaign, Farr sought to remind the public about the passage of NAFTA and the deficit-reduction budget package. But California voters, who carried Gov. Pete Wilson in for another term and overwhelmingly approved Proposition 187, were more concerned about crime, taxes and immigration.

As the beating taken by Prop. 186 revealed, health care reform may be a long way from becoming reality at any level of government. The extraordinary amount of time and attention devoted to that issue in the 103rd session of Congress added to the sense that Washington and the Clinton administration was ineffective at worst, out of touch at best.

Farr countered the negativity that his party has been living with: "The Republicans had been throwing rocks at the majority, so now we will see how well they do," Farr reflected. "It is a lot easier to criticize than it is to lead."

By aggressively polling the public and tracking hot-button issues, McCampbell, a Pebble Beach attorney and small businessman, was paying close attention to the pulse of the electorate. As it turned out, the same issues that buoyed Republican challengers nationwide appeared to help him, but he had a steeper hill to climb, more Democrats to convert.

If the conservative mood in the country helped McCampbell here at home, it was not enough, given the makeup of the district, to send him to Washington.

RLS swimmers, divers look ahead to CCS championships

PIRATE SPORTS from page 21

Live Oak and Salinas are clearly out in front of the others — several schools, including RLS, are in transition. But the Pirates are young and have potential, thus there's promise of bright moments in the future. — B.F.

■ SWIMMING & DIVING

The girls completed their regular season in the two-day MTAL championships last Wednesday and Friday, ending up in fourth place for the meet and the season.

The Pirates held the lead after the diving portion, which was held Wednesday, Nov. 2, with four divers scoring points. Freshman Evans Dowlen led the team with a third-place finish, while junior Tamsen Fricke, freshman Jennifer Kaplan and junior Mary McConville placed sixth, seventh and 11th, respectively.

In the swimming competition last Friday, the Pirates were paced by junior standout Breen Murphy, a double winner in the 200 and 500 free, and senior Kim Clark, who took a second in the 50 free and a third in the 100 free. Murphy and Clark will lead other successful swimmers and divers to the CCS championships in Santa Clara on Friday and Saturday. — J.D.

■ CROSS COUNTRY

The runners finished the regular season at Toro Park in the MTAL championships last Thursday and enjoyed solid success. Sophomore Erin Miller led the girls to a fourth-place finish and a CCS qualification with a second-place finish, just nine seconds behind the winner.

Senior Damian Crevello qualified individually for CCS, finishing sixth and also earned all-league honors as the boys took fifth in the meet. Senior Pete West, the prerace favorite, did not place due to what he said was simply "a bad day." The girls will race in CCS competition on Saturday. — J.D.

Class(ical) acts come to Carmel...

■ Diva Montserrat Caballe sings benefit recital Saturday.

FOLLOWING THE production of the Three Tenors concert in Los Angeles last July, the Rudas Organization has decided to establish an annual concert series to benefit local youth. This year's performance will be given by soprano Montserrat Caballé, in recital at 8 p.m. Saturday at Sunset Center in Carmel.

The two organizations benefiting from the recital are the Boys and Girls Clubs of the Monterey Peninsula and the Salinas Valley.

The Rudas Organization will pick up all expenses for the recital, and the entire ticket proceeds, without deduction, will be donated.

Caballé's fame began when she was asked at short notice to learn the title role for Donizetti's Lucretia Borgia which was to be given concert performance at Carnegie Hall. She was to sing in the place of mezzo-soprano Marilyn Horne (who performed in Carmel last month).

Although she was utterly unknown in the United States, after her first aria, the audience gave her a 20-minute ovation. Representatives of major operatic and recording companies were in attendance. At the end of the concert, RCA offered her a contract, the next day's papers raved about the concert, and overnight her international career was launched.

Since then, she has performed in the world's most esteemed opera houses, including La Scala Milan, Vienna Straatsoper, London royal Opera House Covent Garden, Opéra de Paris, Gran Teatro del Licao Barcelona, and the Bolshoi Moscow.

She has sung at such esteemed concert halls as London's Royal Festival Hall, Avery Fisher Hall (New York City), Theatre des Champs Elysee (Paris), and many more.

Caballé has also sung as a soloist with prestigious orchestras and conductors such as Leonard Bernstein, James Levine, Seiji Ozawa, Riccardo Muti, Sir Colin Davis, and Carlo Maria Giulini.

Her stage roles number almost 90, and has commercially recorded over 80 titles, half of which are of complete operas.

She is known as well for her collaborative projects with artists in other musical genres, including an album, Barcelona, with the late Freddie Mercury of the rock group Queen. She has also worked with experimental pianist Vangelis, known in part for the music he composed for the film Chariots of Fire.

Montserrat Caballé

The singer has received numerous international awards, including the Order of Dona Isabel La Catolica from Spain and the Comandeur des Arts et des Lettres from France. She sang during the Olympic Games held in Barcelona, and this year she was made honorary ambassador of the United Nations.

Caballé was born in Barcelona in 1933, and knew from a young age that she wanted to be an opera singer. When Montserrat was 13, her mother lied about her daughter's age in order to enroll her in singing classes at the local Conservatoire.

In 1954 Caballé left the Conservatoire having won the Gold Medal of the Liceu, the local opera house. She had an extensive operatic career and was widely known in Europe long before her Carnegie Hall performance.

Ticket prices will be uniform, $50, assigned on a first-come, first-served basis, and may be obtained by calling 800-552-6168.

Caballé will give several West Coast performances with the Rudas Organization before her recital at Carnegie Hall in New York City on Nov. 22.

■ Franz Liszt Chamber Orchestra gives second concert of Carmel Music Society's 1994-95 season tonight.

CARMEL MUSIC Society's second concert of the 1994-95 season, a performance by The Franz Liszt Chamber Orchestra, will take place at 8 tonight at Sunset Center in Carmel.

Founded in Hungary in 1962 by the late Frigyes Sandor, the Liszt Orchestra is comprised of 17 string musicians and a harpsichord soloist.

The orchestra made its debut in 1963, and its repertory spans almost the entire history of music. Tonight's program will feature composers Mozart, Dvorak, Elgar and Bartok.

Tickets may be purchased for $25 at the door or by calling 625-9938. Subject to availability, student rush tickets may be purchased after 7:40 p.m. at the door for $10 each.

Further information may be obtained by calling 625-9938.

■ Czech pianist Ivan Moravec, coming into his own in the United States, performs at Sunset Center Sunday.

THE KEYBOARD Artist Series will open its 1994-95 season with a recital by Czech pianist Ivan Moravec at 4 p.m. Sunday at Sunset Center in Carmel.

The victim of cold war artistic repression, Moravec was seldom permitted to travel to Western Europe and the United States. All this has changed during the past five years and Moravec is now becoming widely recognized as one of the foremost pianists of his generation. His recordings of Chopin and Debussy have won him a cult following, and his infrequent recital appearances usually sell out.

Moravec lived in Prague during the Nazi occupation and during the years of Communist realm which followed.

In Carmel, Moravec will be performing Beethoven's 32 Variations in C Minor, a group of Chopin's works including the Ballades in A-flat Major and G Minor, Debussy's Estampes and Feux d'artifice and Janacek's In the Mist.

A limited number of tickets from $16 to $22 are available. They can be purchased at the box office on the afternoon of the performance or reserved by calling 624-7971.

Carmel seeks new coordinator(s) for Outdoor Art Festival, Homecrafters

By IVY WESTON

JOAN VANDERVORT is known to many Carmelites as the founder of two popular annual events — the Homecrafters Marketplace and the Outdoor Art Festival.

Vandervort started the Homecrafters 24 years ago, and the Outdoor Art Festival five years ago. Then, due to time constraints, she was no longer able to organize the Outdoor Art Festival.

"She got really busy, and a year ago did the Outdoor Art Festival for the last time," explained Brian Donoghue, Community and Cultural Director for the City of Carmel.

So the most recent Outdoor Art Festival was organized by Dee Noble, brought in to take the place of Vandervort (who was still running the Homecrafters). "She just did a wonderful job," Donoghue said of Noble. "She even put together corporate sponsorship."

However, Noble is unable to organize next year's festival, as she is undergoing an illness that is restricting her ability to do so. In addition, Vandervort is retiring from the job of putting together the Homecrafters Marketplace after this year's Homecrafters, slated for Nov. 19. So now, the city's Community and Cultural Commission is looking for a person or persons to fill these voids.

"We would like to find one person interested in both jobs, or two people interested in one or the other. Or a non-profit organization, like a service club, school district or volunteer organization," Donoghue said. "The fourth possibility is a commercial concern, like a corporate sponsorship.

"However, we're a little less interested in the commercial concern in order to keep the 'Carmel character,'" Donoghue added. "What we do want is a person or persons who would be able to keep the community in mind."

Jazz Tides

By JOHN DETRO

Naturally funny people in jazz? That gang includes Biff Smith, who meets a fellow loon tonight

NATURALLY FUNNY people in jazz? Dizzy, of course. Jack Sheldon. The singers Kitty Margolis and Madeline Eastman. Monk, in his ever-special, interplanetary way. . . .

Locally, we have pianist Biff Smith. A crisp player, teacher at Robert Louis Stevenson School, Monterey Jazz Festival board member, Biff has the understated verbal style and sidewise outlook of a supper club comedian.

Tonight at 8 in Carmel's Cherry Hall, The Biffer will meet a fellow loon — witty poet and medical man John Schatz. The program notes pledge "an evening of piano and verse," but with this pair the phrase means more than usual.

John is a cardiologist for Natividad Medical Center. He has a couple of books at the shops. Works in progress include a CD called Able Lincoln Mimics Fred Astaire.

Tickets cost $8 at the door. Or $7 apiece for Cherry Center members.

Big fun.

Do men and women come from different planets?

Coffee Break

By BEVERLY BORGMAN

I HAD a blind date last Saturday, and I must say, it worked out really well. Now, before you get any ideas about my loyalty to the Significant Other, let me explain. My blind date was with a woman, and we met at the Village Corner in broad daylight.

"Carrie" had called me in regard to a business matter, but in the course of our telephone conversation we decided to meet over a cup of coffee.

Within an hour we both knew more about each other than our mothers ever knew, thus proving one of the theories in the current best-selling non-fiction book, Men Are From Mars, Women Are From Venus — that women like to talk about their problems, and when they run out of problems of their own, they are content to talk about the problems of others.

This is not news, of course, but it's interesting that the author of the book is a man. It's also helpful for sales. I don't know any man who would willingly buy a self-help book on relationships written by a woman.

Most men go immediately on the defensive if their partner even hints that things could be better. Just the sight of such a book on the coffee table could be a blow to male self-esteem. For example, the S.O., when he caught sight of my reading matter, said, "Why isn't it titled, Women Are From Venus, Men Are From Mars?"

He immediately assumed that men, in general, were being attacked. "You're an ex-editor," I said. "You can see how this title fairly trips off the tongue. The reverse order would be cumbersome."

I believe his reply was, "Humph."

Indeed, the book by John Gray, Ph.D., seems to be very even-handed, and while I'm only on Chapter Five as I write this, I'm impressed by the truisms.

I've suspected it for a long time

I'm also amused by the clever premise that men and women came from different planets. Certainly, I've suspected it for a long time. Let me quote from page 67: "Quite often a man will suddenly stop communicating and become silent. This was unheard of on Venus. At first a woman thinks the man is deaf. She thinks that maybe he doesn't hear what's being said and that is why he is not responding. "

You see men and women think and process information very differently. Women think out loud, sharing their process of inner discovery with an interested listener...or a woman discovers what she wants to say through the process of just talking."

But, says Gray, "...men process information very differently. Before they talk or respond, they first silently 'mull over' or think about what they have heard or experienced. This process could take from minutes to hours."

Try days.

Not so when a woman listens to another woman.

"Instinctively when the speaker pauses the female listener will reassure the speaker by making responses like "oh, un-huh, hmmm, ah, ah-ha, or humph." (The latter tells me that the S.O. is getting in touch with his Venusian side. Didn't he just say "humph" a few paragraphs back?)

TV-equipped cave

Martians, when faced with a problem, retreat to their "cave." Said cave is usually equipped with a television set.

Gray says that Martians often do their most serious thinking while watching televised sports. There they sort out such major problems as a potential divorce, job loss or Christmas shopping. Of course, to a Venusian it looks as if he's just a couch potato without a serious thought in his head — another example of how Martians can be misunderstood.

Ask any woman and she'll tell you that at one time or another she has said to her beloved, "You don't listen to me," and inevitably the reply has been, "What do you mean I don't listen. I can tell you everything you said."

At last this phenomenon has been explained by Dr. Gray: Martians are able to record conversations with 5% of their minds while the other 95% copes with more serious concerns.

I found more advice on page 20. Mary, a Venusian, was in a car with Tom, a Martian, on their way to a party when it became clear that Tom was lost. Mary suggested he call for help. Tom became very silent. They eventually found their way to the party, but the tension from that moment lasted through the evening.

Mary hadn't a clue as to why Tom was upset. Her view was: "I love and care about you, so I am offering help."

What Tom "heard" was, "I don't trust you to get us there. You're incompetent."

According to Gray, Tom was particularly vulnerable and needed extra love as he circled the same block. It was a very special opportunity to "honor him by not offering advice."

This is where I get into real trouble. I'm not the kind of Venusian who could circle the same block for a half hour and not provide a solution.

I'm also likely to provide advice on how to load the dishwasher, how to program the VCR, how to unplug a drain, which grocery store has the best prices, and why polyester jackets are no longer fashionable.

No wonder the S.O. spends so much time in his cave, and why blind dates with other women are so much fun.

Contemporary Carmel Theater Festival

By MATTHEW FRIDAY
Pine Cone Theater Critic

THE FIRST Contemporary Carmel Theater Festival, comprised of four full shows and three dramatic readings spread over three days (last Friday, Saturday and Sunday), was an unequivocal success. The quality of individual pieces and, in fact, the entire festival, shined.

As envisioned by local actress, director and producer Robin McKee, the Contemporary Carmel Theater Festival is to serve as a "play development retreat," featuring works-in-progress and new or challenging performance pieces from a variety of performers and writers.

The festival is the result of a collaboration between artists and the resurgent interest among audiences in the immediacy of contemporary theater.

Three terrific shows

I was fortunate to see three terrific shows on Saturday evening. Each of the pieces lasted no more than about 75 minutes and included time for refreshments, conversation, and browsing through the Cherry center's art exhibits between shows.

While each of the festival's shows held out enticing possibilities, Saturday evening's group offered comedy, dramatization and performance pieces, with either a one-time-only or last-chance opportunity to see two out of three.

Eric Trulles' comedic reading of his one-man work-in-progress, It's the Day After Valentine's Day, was hilarious. A wry, passionate, plaintive love farce, the work is based on the foibles of an older single man wrestling with his demons, who've taken the form of Cupid. Puppy love, joyful abandon, the dissolution of boundaries, the hopeful sniveling and second guessing of love are reveled in.

Trulles' swept the audience up in his infectious enthusiasm, he whined, crawled, yelled and swore, raced back and forth tearing at his shirt, disarmed with his directness and confessional honesty, employed the audience's empathy but kept us safe. He had the audience laughing throughout.

James Dickey's poem, May Day Sermon, opened simply: church music, a plain plank cross, a pulpit, straight-backed shaker chair and a hat rack on a dimly-lit stage. A solitary spot streamed down, glowed around the Bible lying unopened on the bare wood pulpit.

The Chameleons

By LYN BRONSON

PERFORMANCE CARMEL has done it again. The Chameleons, a dance-mime-theatrical presentation by the talented duo of Keith Berger and Sharon Diskin, charmed a capacity audience at Sunset Center Theater last weekend with a fresh, stimulating and highly entertaining evening.

My guess is that young children made up a quarter of the audience, and they responded spontaneously and intelligently to this virtually wordless theater. The truth is that all ages had fun—it was very entertaining.

Some of the events of the evening could be clearly understood and others were slightly more ambiguous. Perhaps the more elusive moments, like a Rorschach inkblot, tend to encourage the members of the audience to project their own experience into the scene.

Dixieland Monterey already planning next March's edition

Trad troops

Now that's getting a jump on things. Even though the new edition isn't scheduled until March of next year (3/3-4-5), Dixieland Monterey already has issued its primary promotional brochure.

The handsome publication says the 1995 party will honor localite Edna Lewis — bandleader, saxist, "musical pioneer and still onstage at 87 years young."

The announced lineup: Abalone Stompers, Blue Street, G-Whiz Boogie Band, Edna Lewis and Friends, High Sierra, Hot Frogs, Jean Kittrell Trio, Midnight Rose, Night Blooming Jazzmen, Professor Plum, Royal Society Jazz Orchestra, State Street with Marsha K, Mike Vax — Great American, Wild Rose All-Stars, Wooden Nickle, Richard Zimmerman Ragtime.

Mentioned are "cabaret locations within walking distance of each other," a Saturday morning jazz parade with old cars and flappers, Sunday morning jazz services.

"All-event badges are $40 each when ordered prior to Dec. 31," we're told, "and $45 after Jan. 1. No other badges have an advance sale discount."

Children under 12 will get in free with an adult. The hotline: 443-5260.

Meanwhile, Monterey Bay Hot Jazz Society plans a major bash from 1:30 to 5 p.m. Sunday at Monterey Moose Lodge. The playbill for Founders Day — Monterey Bay Classic Jazz Band's reunion with area patriarch Jake Stock. Papa Jake always has his tenor sax at the ready.

Dixieland musicians are invited to sign up and play the jam sets. At the door: members $4, guests $6, players free.

As usual, dancers are encouraged — along with "spats, derbys, parasols."

Here and there

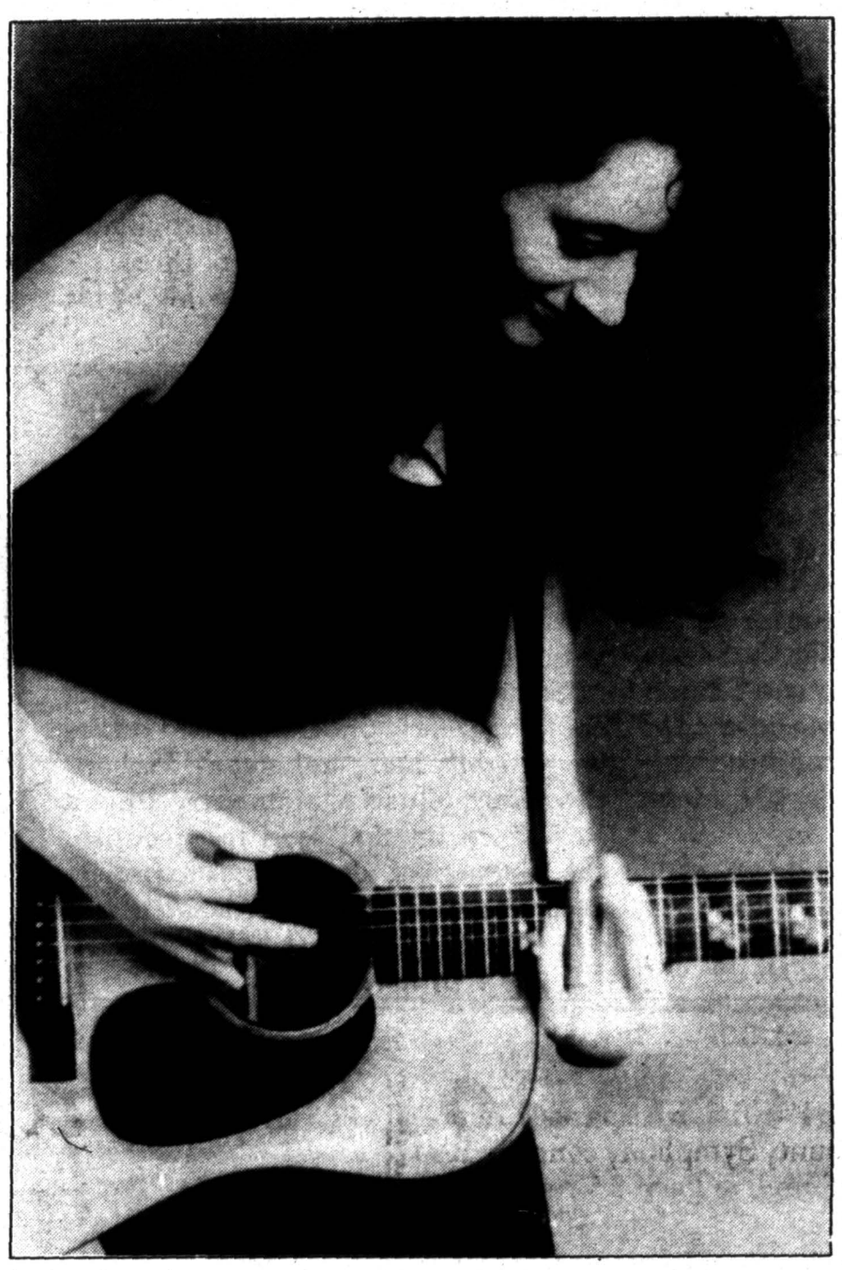
This isn't, after all, a very big peninsula. Even if you must drive a tiny taste, she's well worth the trouble.

Contemporary blues guitarist Del Rey will play Viva in downtown Monterey starting at 9 p.m. Friday. Another woman who composes and plays guitar will share the stage area — C.J. MacDuffee.

Del Rey has recorded significantly. And she has done extremely valuable work via her Women in the Blues performance lectures. Passionate and moving stuff.

This wraps up the women's series put together at Viva by booker Barbara Murphy. Reservations: 646-1415.

Barbara's responsible, too, for the Saturday night action at Pacific Grove Art Center. Cape Cod singer, guitarist and songwriter Patty Larkin will do shows at 7:00 and 9:30.



Singer/songwriter Patty Larkin plays Saturday in PG.

Opening will be Cormac McCarthy, another New Englander with solid credentials as vocalist, composer and storyteller.

Tickets cost $13.50 advance (PGAC, Cymbaline Records, Do Re Mi Music) or $15 at the door.

Over near Cannery Row, the new Doc Ricketts' Lab will spotlight singer Kenny Rankin on Tuesday night. Comedy from Chicago Steve will set things up for Kenny.

Shows at 7 and 10. It's $10 advance or $12 at the door. Call 649-4241.

Coming up Nov. 17 — high-energy reedman Clarence Clemons and The Red Bank Rockers plus local blues guys Red Beans and Rice.

Tillie Gort's of Pacific Grove will have guitarist and vocalist Karl Dobbratz on Saturday night. Info: 373-0335.

This just in from blues broadcaster Leslie Ann Knight over at KKUP Radio (91.5FM) in Cupertino. From 6 until 9 a.m. Monday, her show will feature live the gritty guitarist and tale-spinner Alvin (Youngblood) Hart.

Alvin sings lots of originals. He draws as well on the work of giants like Charlie Patton, Leadbelly and The Mississippi Shieks.

Randy and Mike

Over in Santa Cruz, Kuumbwa Jazz Center's next major show will be on Tuesday night instead of the usual Monday. You'll get a burning band — the Brecker Brothers with Randy on trumpet and Michael handling tenorman chores.

They're traveling in bright company: James Genus (bass), Dean Brown (guitar), George Whitty at the keyboards, Rodney Holmes (drums). Shows at 7:30 and 9:30; $17 advance (Cymbaline in downtown Monterey) or $19 at the door.

Call their bag jazz-funk fusion or whatever you like, this front line can play with anyone in the world. Count Randy and Mike's credits and you'll find a total of more than 1,800 albums — everyone from Steely Dan to Jaco Pastorius and their own bands.

Near the end

San Francisco Jazz Festival is winding down, but it certainly isn't going out with a whimper.

On Friday night, there will be a block party on 11th Street between Folsom and Harrison. Tough younger groups: James T. Kirk, Charlie Hunter Trio, Broun Fellinis, Alphabet Soup.

Saturday night at Masonic Auditorium — Ornette Coleman with his Prime Time unit and a new acoustic quartet.

Sunday night at the Masonic — Branford Marsalis Quartet; Sonny Simmons Trio. Info: (415) 788-7353.

Not incidentally, Branford announces a leave of absence from his gig as Tonight Show bandleader. He says he'll go back, but now wants to do more concerts and plug his new album.

Handling Branford's speaking role will be the band's guitarist — Kevin Eubanks. I interviewed Kevin when he did a one-nighter in Monterey some years back, and he's extremely smart and sincere.

How fine that Jay Leno's audience will get to know such a positive spokesperson from the jazz realm.

You needn't have extensive art background to coordinate Outdoor Art Festival, Homecrafters

Other qualities the ideal candidate(s) should have include a lot of patience, an aesthetic eye, the ability to work with a diverse group of people, and personal accountability.

A background in arts and crafts is not necessarily a requirement for the job, according to Linda Anderson, Chair of the Community and Cultural Commission, whose members will ultimately, jointly pick the new coordinator(s).

"We're just going to see who's interested," she said. "Obviously we'd want somebody who's interested in arts and crafts."

Donoghue said those interested in the position(s) should contact him as soon as possible. "We're a little concerned because if we don't find the person or persons, the festival and Homecrafters may be in jeopardy, and that's something nobody wants," he said.

Also, the more time goes by, the less time the new coordinator would have to organize the event(s).

"If we found someone in January, that only gives them about five months," to prepare for the Outdoor Art Festival, said Stephanie Snuggs, who serves on the Community and Cultural Commission.

The Homecrafters Marketplace is always held the weekend prior to Thanksgiving, and the Outdoor Art Festival is held in June. Those interested in the position(s) are encouraged to call 624-3996.

'Affair' is less romantic tale than duo's glossy ego vehicle

■ Beatty and Bening have the true glow of Hollywood stars, but the thrice-told tale offers only forced tears.

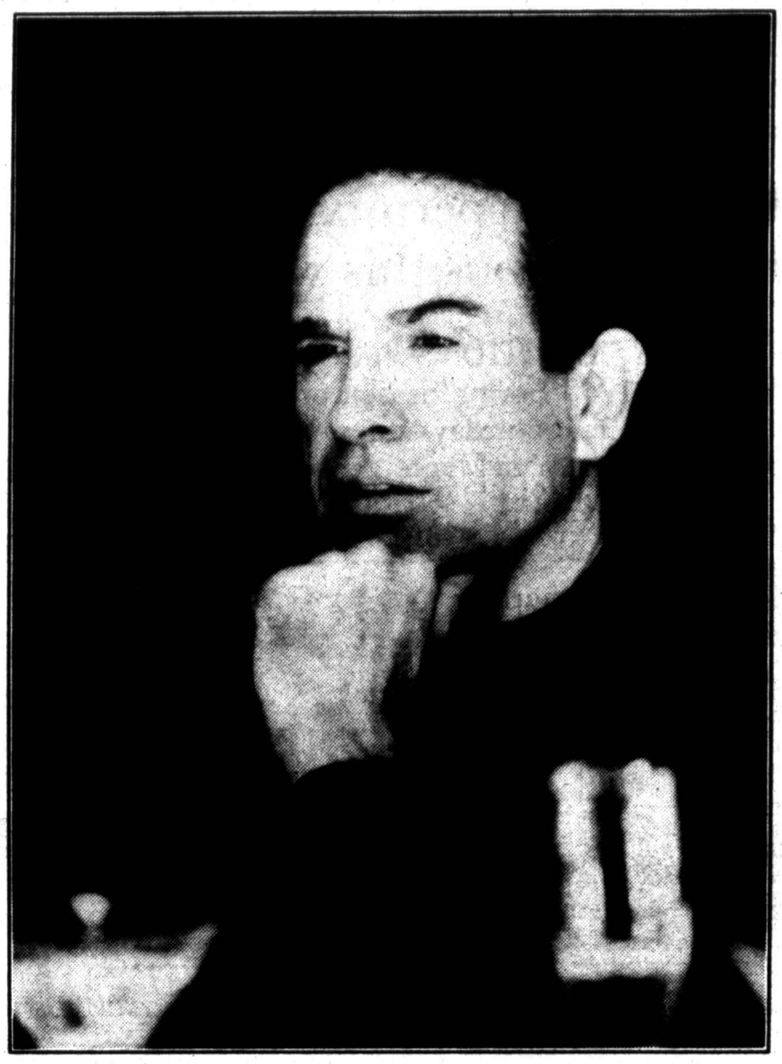
By CRAIG ARNOTT
Pine Cone Film Critic



Warren Beatty

Annette Bening

THE SCENE: Mike and Terry are caught in some kind of mutual attraction, and they amble through a lush meadow on a lonely island in the South Pacific.

Fine so far, but the problem? They are wearing sunglasses and are dressed in brilliant white linen, looking for all the world like a pair of smug Hollywood stars on location. They are, of course, Warren Beatty and Annette Bening.

In reality, the two would be sticky from the humidity, swatting at kamikaze mosquitos and wishing they'd brought a compass and flares as their clothes become mud-splattered and grass-stained.

But Love Affair has little concern for reality. A remake of both a movie of the same name (1939) and An Affair To Remember (1957), it is determined to present a gooey, melodramatic handkerchief of a story. The film seems much less of a romantic jaunt than an ego vehicle for Beatty and Bening.

Mike is a former football player turned sportscaster, famous for his many and varied dalliances (here the film dances with the truth).

Terry is a teacher, singer and amateur yacht designer. The two flirt on a plane bound for Sydney that must make an abrupt landing in the South Pacific. The upshot and convenient plot device is that they're forced to spend three days "trapped" on a cruise ship before they can return to the mainland.

Forbidden love

Since both are engaged to other people and Mike is a kind of celebrity, their blossoming love is taboo and must be kept discreet.

Mike is cornered into playing a nimble game of cat and mouse with a tabloid photographer on the ship before he is able to score the important moonlit dance with Terry. Their forbidden courtship brings them to a meeting with Mike's aunt Ginny (Katharine Hepburn), who by a stroke of luck is living comfortably on a nearby island. Ginny is surprised she's not meeting Mike's fiancée but rather one of his friends."

A rather long and painful talk follows, during which Ginny makes some strange and oblique references to the comparative mating rituals of ducks and swans. It might be better to imagine this exchange than to see it.

Upon their tearful farewell after the trip home to America, Mike and Terry vow to meet in three months atop the Empire State Building. If one doesn't show, the other will acknowledge the end of the affair.

Tragedy inevitably rears its ugly head and this reviewer will say little more than that — if just in respects to the earlier cinematic tellings of this story.

It's fair to say that the strongest dramatic performance in Love Affair comes from the wheelchair. It's the golden prop that, with its silent metallic glare, is sure to elicit sobs from the more easily afflicted members of the audience.

Gimmicky filmmaking

Any natural attraction between Beatty and Bening is inflated and therefore distorted by gimmicky filmmaking. Closeups are shot through a milky lens and the lighting is so unbelievably perfect it's as if the couple were being stalked by some divine sunbeam.

Director Glen Gordon Caron also has a predilection for swooping overhead shots, whether of a boat, a skyscraper or a plane. They're pretty, but seem more appropriate for a travel documentary than a love story.

Bening succeeds in acting pert and coquettish; Beatty does his best to avoid looking like an aging cad and supporting turns by Garry Shandling and Chloe Webb as the pair's friends are agile, though frustratingly brief. Shandling in particular is a good foil, sneaking in tasty one-liners and droll asides. He even resembles Beatty, albeit in a droopy way.

Some viewers will find solace in the worn mechanics of Love Affair and delight in its resurrection of a tried and true formula. Others will wish for a more vibrant and less sappy story.

THE REVIEW

Steinbeck's former home to be commemorated today

THE HISTORIC Lara-Soto adobe in Monterey will be commemorated beginning at noon today, 50 years to the day John Steinbeck moved his family into the historical home. The building is located at 460 Pierce Street in Monterey.

While living in the Lara-Soto adobe, Steinbeck wrote The Pearl, and planned the motion picture by the same name. The adobe is now part of the campus of the Monterey Institute of International Studies.

A reception at the Monterey Institute of International Studies' Irvine Auditorium, located at 499 Pierce Street in Monterey, will begin at 7 p.m.

Following the reception, the movie The Pearl will be shown. The presentation carries a fee of $10 per person.

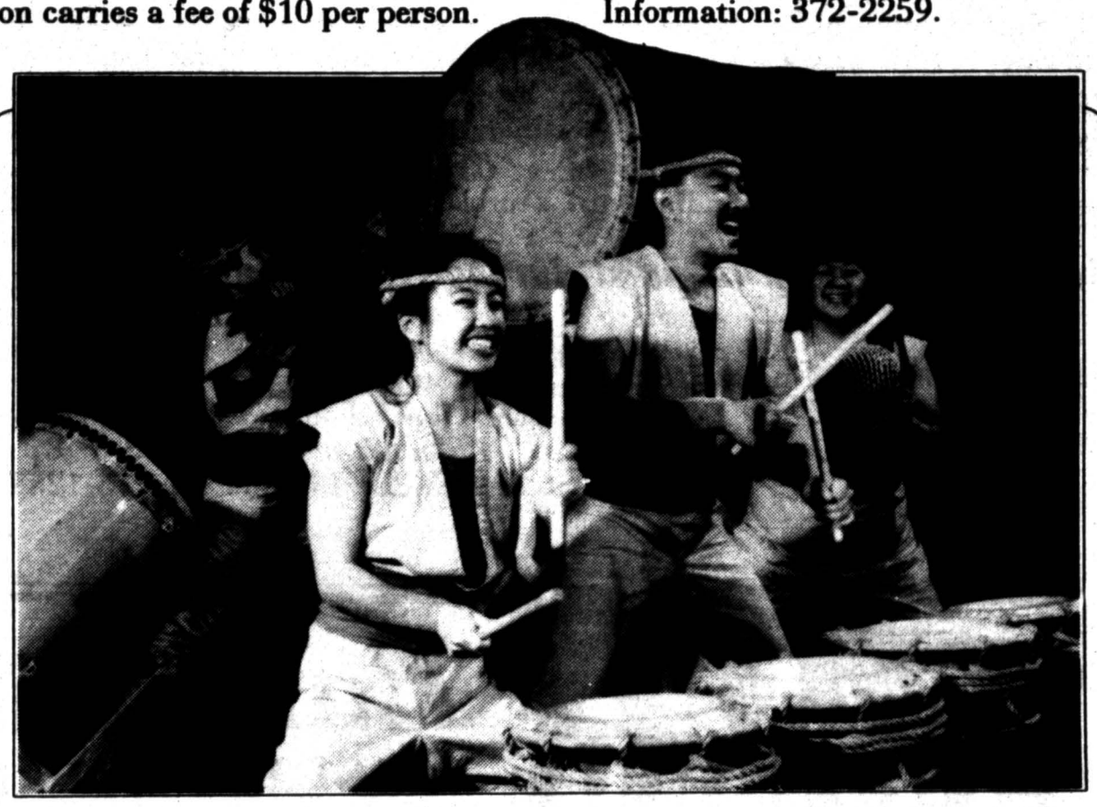
Special guests Thom Steinbeck, son John Steinbeck, and speaker Dr. Susan Shillinglaw, director of the Steinbeck Research Center at San Jose State University, will be in attendance.

A showing of Steinbeck's home movies shot at the Lara-Soto Adobe and while on location in Mexico filming The Pearl will also take place at the reception.

Tickets for the reception are available at the Monterey Institute of International Studies Bookstore and at Bay Books in downtown Monterey.

All proceeds will be donated to Monterey's Cannery Row Foundation and San Jose State University's Steinbeck Research Center.

Information: 372-2259.



San Jose Taiko

San Jose Taiko drum troupe set to perform at Santa Catalina Friday

THE SAN Jose Taiko drummers will appear at 8 p.m. Friday at the Santa Catalina School Performing Arts Center.

The troupe will present its blend of traditional Japanese drumming with the rhythms of African, Latin, and jazz percussion.

San Jose Taiko was formed in 1973 by Asian Americans searching for an artistic expression of their experiences. Many members were third-generation Japanese Americans, or Sansei, who looked to Japan for initial inspiration. The instrument they selected was the Japanese taiko or drum, traditionally used to dispel evil spirits, instill fear in enemies, and accompany prayers.

San Jose Taiko has performed throughout the United States and Canada. In 1987, the group traveled to Japan to perform a joint concert with Ondekoza, one of Japan's premiere taiko groups, and in 1993 the two groups appeared together again in a joint concert at Carnegie Hall.

Admission is free. Further information may be obtained by calling 655-9341.

Carmel Ballet Academy dance event will feature pieces by local choreographers

The 1994 program will highlight the work of Academy director Carol Benton, featuring dancing to music composed and played by William Zeitler. Dances by choreographers Kristine Tarozzi, Gloria Elber, Stephanie Waldrip, Fran Spector and a piece by drama instructor Leslie Williams will also be shown.

SPINNING WHEEL INN

Father, son team combines efforts to make Carmel restaurant a winner

IT'S TRULY a family affair at Carmel's Spinning Wheel Restaurant.

In July 1993, John Nahas — at the time proprietor of the adjacent Spinning Wheel Inn — and his son Leo reopened the restaurant, which is a stone's throw from Carmel City Hall. And the father-son team has made it into an instant hit that has been warmly embraced by locals as well as visitors.

John and Leo show a special love for their work. They both pour their heart and soul into the operation and work closely together to plan the daily specials and menu changes. Often you will find them in the kitchen after hours testing a new recipe. They both work seven days a week and more than likely you will see them there for breakfast, lunch and dinner.

Pick any one of the meals at the Spinning Wheel Restaurant and you're in for a treat. Amidst all the competition on the peninsula, Nahas and Co. don't have to take a back seat when it comes to the quality of the food.

Delicious dinners

At dinner time, with the sound of the crackling fireplace soothing the soul, the Spinning Wheel offers a nice selection of pasta, chicken, beef and lamb. Ask Toni Jepson, executive director of the Carmel Business Association, who recently selected the Spinning Wheel for a private dinner about the rack of lamb and you'll get this response: "It was fantastic. It also was one of the nicest presentations I've seen in some time."

The rack of lamb is seared and coated with Dijon mustard and comes with roasted ground pistachios sprinkled on top.

You may want to opt for the mouth-watering filet mignon or a New York steak — for almost unheard of prices of $13.95.

Then there's the seafood selections, which include petralé sole, delectable scallops meuniere or fresh halibut.

Brand new pasta dishes include large prawns served over angel hair pasta. And there's charbroiled chicken as well as a house specialty, liver and onions, which Nahas says is always a popular choice.

All entrees include your choice of soup of the day, French onion soup or a house garden salad. Like everything else at the Spinning Wheel, the wine menu is complete and very reasonably priced.

When it comes to dessert, it's hard to find a better creme brulée. But when your waiter describes the homemade cheesecake, it becomes an agonizing choice.

Turkey time

Then there's the dedicated luncheon crowd, who knows by now there's simply no other option when it comes to the fresh turkey sandwich, complete with mashed potatoes and gravy. And that's because chef Juan "Tony" Velasquez roasts a whole turkey every day, thereby giving the Spinning Wheel a leg up on it competitors.

"No precooked deli meats for us," Nahas says proudly. "Everything we serve is prepared here on the premises." Homemade soups are a popular daily features as well as a nice selection of fresh salads.

When it comes to chef Velasquez, Nahas knows he has a jewel.

"He has been here since we opened," Nahas said of Velasquez, who came over from the Old Bath House in Pacific Grove. "When Tony is working, we never have to worry. His presentations are always a piece of art."

Morning peace

That applies to breakfast as well, where the Spinning Wheel sends out the delightful aroma of sizzling bacon and fresh-brewed coffee. Combine the fireplace, cloth-covered tables and cozy environment, and it's like breakfast at home ... only better.

The breakfast menu at the Spinning Wheel will appeal to any crowd. Consider starting with a glass of fresh-squeezed orane juice and then select from crisp waffles, made-to-order omelettes, thick french toast with powdered sugar and cinnamon or the wholeweat-cornmeal-pecan pancakes.

Whether it's morning, noon or night, you'll always see John and Leo in an ever-accommodating mood and you'll be treated like friends.

"As the owners of the Spinning Wheel Restaurant, we have discovered that it can be rewarding, challenging and occasionally frustrating," John says. "Many of our guests we now view as friends, looking forward to their next dining experience."

One thing Nahas can count on is that more than likely there will be a return visit.

Cultural Council announces 10 arts awards recipients

THE CULTURAL Council for Monterey County (CCMC) last Monday presented 10 1994 Distinguished Benefactors of the Arts Awards at a gala ceremony at the Hyatt Regency Resort in Monterey. This year's tributes for outstanding and noteworthy expressions of local arts philanthropy went to seven individuals or couples, two foundations and one business.

Individual winners included: Roberta Bialek, supporter of the Carmel Bach Festival and KAZU-FM; Kate Dietterle, volunteer on behalf of the Monterey Peninsula Museum of Art; and Skip Cohen, for support of the Center for Photographic Art. Awards were presented posthumously to James G. Ziegler, for contributions to music organizations, and Peter B. Hawes for support of many arts organizations, particularly Youth Music Monterey.

Mr. and Mrs. Horace Wilson received an award for their long-standing support of the Monterey County Symphony; Paul Boczkowski and Marie Wainscoat shared honors for their efforts on behalf of older artists in the community.

Two foundations were given awards by the Cultural Council: The Catherine L. and Robert O. McMahan Foundation, for its support of the Carl Cherry Center for the Arts; and The Barnet Segal Charitable Trust, in recognition of efforts to enable the Pacific Repertory Theater, (formerly GroveMont), to acquire the Golden Bough Theater in Carmel.

This year's lone corporate honoree was Merrill Lynch, Pierce, Fenner and Smith Inc., a long standing supporter of the Bach Festival.

Masters of Ceremonies at the event were television journalists Alan Richmond and Dina Ruiz. The Distinguished Benefactor of the Arts Award statuette was designed by sculptor Eleen Auvil.

The winners were selected by the Cultural Council from among 40 nominees.

long gray coat and humble hat, approached quietly from a side entrance. Crossing the stage, she slowly removed her hat and coat and hung these carefully on the hat rack, then turned deliberately to the audience. Gripping the podium in both hands, Hanley began the long incantatory poem, pulsing, shouting, sighing, a rich praise of Earth, her creatures, relationships and the depths of sensual love.

Its full name, May Day Sermon to the Women of Gilmer County, Georgia by a Woman Preacher Leaving the Baptist Church, is the story of a fundamentalist backwoods Christian woman discovering her body, her sexuality and the power of her womanhood.

At almost 8:30, satiated with the impact of the show, I collected myself for Shoehorn!

This one surprised me, challenging political correctness by playing on its performers' ethnicity. It was a story told between two young men, a Jew and an African-American, employing tap dance, jazzy sax riffs and all the brash bravado one might expect of sharp-edged young men.

The tap dancing was fresh and genuine, recalling Honey Coles, Bo Jangles and Gregory Hines. The stamina and spunk of the two characters was repeated in audience call-outs.

Performed by Idris Ackamoor and Mark Goodman, who both have numerous theatrical credits under their belts, and produced by Herman Levern Jones, Shoehorn! casts traditional performance forms and social commentary into a cross-cultural pot, out of which we draw our similar flavor, though we still look and act different.

Our area is experiencing a Renaissance of the sort of character that suggested its identity 75 years or more ago.

There were quite a few shows I didn't have time to see; I wish I'd been able to see all of them.

Between the new Contemporary Carmel Theater Festival, Performance Carmel, Pacific Repertory Theatre, and the World Stage, in addition to the older venues like the Forest Theater and Monterey Peninsula College, our area is experiencing a Renaissance of the sort of character that suggested its identity 75 years or more ago.

With the California State University at Monterey Bay coming as well, this new explorative vision could make out comfortable climate pretty exciting for years to come.

The Chameleons: So much said, without words

The opening piece, called "Pastiche," had one amusing part in which Diskin appeared to be dressing a department store mannequin and had considerable difficulty getting the dummy's limbs to remain in exactly the required position or to keep him remaining upright without falling over. She kept sidling toward the exit only to have to rush back to keep him from toppling to the floor.

The second scene on the program, called "Inflatable!" was an imaginative skit showing a man receiving a package containing an inflatable doll. As Berger blows it up, Diskin manages to make her body create the illusion of going from a crumpled mess in a box to a fully inflated doll.

After coping with the difficulty of keeping her from floating away and after dancing with her, Berger pulls the plug and deflates not only the doll but also himself. To create these illusions with only the human body is no mean feat and they both did it successfully and brilliantly.

One of the most fascinating pieces on the program was called "Umbrellas," and depicted two strangers, a man and a woman, waiting for a train on a railroad station platform. Both are carrying colorful umbrellas and are standing apart from each other. A wind rises, and with consummate skill the two dancers manage to look as though they are about to go airborne as they cope with the heavy wind.

They are whirled about the stage and are thrown into each other's arms. They separate awkwardly, but recognize a powerful mutual attraction, and after embracing they part and board their separate trains.

Also very entertaining was the piece called "Margaret and Fred," about the tackiest couple you hope you will never meet, that was accomplished with a great deal of humor and charm.

A brilliant and disturbing piece was entitled "The Stalker," with Diskin being stalked on the subway and the street by a sinister stranger. Her voice is heard on a soundtrack combined with the Dies Irae from Mozart's Requiem. The illusions of going up and down subway escalators and riding a subway train have to be seen to be believed.

The longest piece on the program was called "Bedtime" and was inspired by the Northridge earthquake. A couple's sleep is disturbed by several phone calls, an amorous couple parking in front of their house, a trip to the fridge and finally the earthquake itself.

If The Chameleons ever come here again, don't miss them!

By DODIE BARKLEY

Hello, goodbye — the 'baton' is passed

WHAT A welcome and what a goodbye!

With food cooked like it was a going-away party for a king and the Mike Marotta Band playing the most delightful polkas I've ever heard, the Hyatt Regency opened up its grand ballroom last Tuesday evening and threw a reception for outgoing Manager Mike Cassidy (and his wife, Michelle) and incoming Manager Ken Pilgrim (and his wife, Celia).

All of the crown heads of Monterey were represented, praising Cassidy with words and plaques: Congressman Sam Farr; Senator Henry Mello (represented by Pat Allen); Assemblyman Bruce McPherson; Supervisors Barbara Shipnuck and Sam Karas; Monterey Mayor Dan Albert; Monterey County Hospitality Association President Nick Lombardo; and Sardine Factory co-owner Ted Balestreri, who handed Cassidy the governor's proclamation.

There also were many well-known business people: Charles Chrietzberg and his wife Sandra; Kitty Ragsdale and her sister, Estelle; Bert Cutino, Pat Miniaci and many representatives from Seaside and Marina.

Master of Ceremonies David Armanasco introduced Cassidy, who said, "I see some smiling faces in the audience, and a lot of sad ones. Everybody looks a bit unhappy to see me go." That set the tone for the evening, making everyone laugh hilariously. He then told us of his job at the new Hyatt Burlingame, and ended by introducing Pilgrim.

Pilgrim praised Cassidy, commenting that under his management, the building had changed dramatically, with new renovations bringing in much more revenue between 1993 and '94. Pilgrim added that he was brought up in Los Angeles and had always dreamed of coming to Monterey. Cassidy then passed the "baton" (a golf club) to Pilgrim.

After all of the presentations were made, Cassidy bid farewell to the audience, relating a hilarious experience he had with talk-show host David Letterman.

Cassidy was the manager of a hotel in Florida. Letterman could not get accommodations anywhere in the town, and Cassidy managed to get him rooms at his hotel for five days. Cassidy said he was a fan of Letterman's for years after that. Recently, Letterman was to stay at the Hyatt, and when Cassidy heard about it, he reminded the hotel personnel to tell him immediately when Letterman arrived. When they finally met, Letterman couldn't remember Cassidy.

The next day, Cassidy received a golf hat and a note from Letterman, giving him 10 reasons why he shouldn't feel bad about leaving Monterey. Number 10 was: "No matter how much you try, with a name like Cassidy, you'll never be accepted as a paisano." Number nine: "They won't have you to kick around anymore." And the list went on and on like that, until we were all out of breath from laughing so hard.

It is not hard to see why the leadership of a large hotel chain is so important to the economy of Monterey County.

And the winners are...

It was better than the Academy Awards.

It was at the Hyatt Regency last Saturday that 10 local individuals, businesses and institutions were awarded the Distinguished Benefactor of Arts (DBA) awards during a sixth annual dinner ceremony sponsored by the Cultural Council for Monterey County (CCMC).

The awards were created to honor those who have provided distinguished support of the arts. They are called "Benefactors" because of the essential role they play in maintaining the vitality of the cultural life of Monterey County.

Prior to the ceremony, guests and a field of 40 nominees were stopped at the door to have their photos taken. "You are part of the picture," they were told, "and whether you win an award or not, you deserve to be recognized!"

A photographic exhibit, entitled "pART of the Picture," featured Monterey County photographers' pictures of past recipients of the DBA awards.

Mirrored centerpieces with baskets of maidenhair, lillies and beautiful silver leaves adorned the tables as guests sat down to enjoy a delicious chicken dinner. Afterward, a slide presentation with pictures of all 40 nominees was expertly shown, with well-known entrepreneur Alan Richmond's silver-toned voice describing each nominee's contributions to the arts. As the slides were shown, many of the nominees in the audience applauded loudly for each other.

CCMC president Anne McGowan thanked everyone for their help and assistance, especially Tandy Messenger, who arranged the entire event. McGowan called her "indispensable...a great gift...and don't try to steal her away from us."

Dual emcees — former TV weatherman Richmond and KSBW news anchor Dina Ruiz — announced the winners as McGowan handed each a DBA award.

This year's recipients were: Roberta Bialek, The Catherine L. and Robert O. McMahan Foundation, Mrs. George Dietterle, James G. Ziegler, The Barnet Segal Charitable Trust, Peter B. Hawes, Mr. and Mrs. Horace Wilson, Skip Cohen of Hassselblad, Inc., Merrill Lynch, Pierce, Fenner and Smith Inc., Paul Boczkowski and Marie Wainscoat.

Some of the sponsors inlcuded KBACH 95.5 FM, Granite Construction Co., Ansel Adams Gallery, The Carmel Pine Cone, Lloyd Morain and others.

McGowan again thanked all who took part and reminded them to stay and dance to the live music of Just Friends.

How about you being "pART" of the picture next year?

John XXIII Center cocktails at Chateau Julien

I always feel like I'm in France when caught in the soft ambience of Chateau Julien Winery.

It was a unique combination: the soft mood music of a Robert McNamara's classical guitar, some outstanding Shrimp Ragout, Pistachio-Crusted Baby Lamb Chops, Carmel Valley Smoked Salmon and other food donated and served up by Chef Bradley Jones of Bradley's Harbor-Front Restaurant, along with the delicious Chateau Julien wines served by pretty owner Patty Brower.

All of this took place last Saturday at a gathering of friends, volunteers and workers of the John XXIII Center for Spirituality and HIV/AIDS Ministry.

An overwhelming sense of well-being and compassion emanated from the long-standing supporters of the ministry, most of whom probably never imagined they would be doing the kind of work they are now involved in. So many of them that were merely volunteers have now become full-time staff persons.

Sheila Bostic was a volunteer and is now front office manager. Rosemarie Cornell, board chairman of the fund-raising committee, was a volunteer for several years, and Jonathan Martins and Brent Krider told us they are volunteers and fund raisers. Chef Jones always donates food for parties given by the John XXIII Center, as well as for other charities like Big Buddies and the Hospice.

Cornell told us the news is not good about the spread of AIDS. It has now tripled and has a very strong hold in heterosexual homes — the wife contracting it from the husband.

John XXIII Director, Father Tom Long, told us that three facilities now exist — one in Seaside, one in Monterey and one in Salinas. Organizers are considering opening a summer residence in Salinas. Their Outreach Program extends to Monterey, Santa Cruz, San Benito and San Luis Obispo Counties.

Using the spiritual approach they say, "...persons who are infected and those who have been affected, regardless of background, are welcome and invited. We believe in a God who is love itself."

Craig Hemphill carried on a live auction of beautiful artifacts, bringing the Ministry some much needed financial help.

All of the above have a hard row to hoe, but they are reminders of the great words of one of the world's greatest poets, John Donne: "Do not seek to know for whom the bells toll. They toll for thee."

You can do something about HIV/AIDS. Your gift will make a profound difference and is tax-deductible. Write to them at P.O. Box 1931, Monterey, CA 93942.

Home buyers frustrated by inability to find insurance

■ Unless a quick resolution is found, the problem could begin to seriously hurt market.

California Trends

By BRADLEY INMAN

IN THE last two weeks, the rapidly shrinking number of companies that will provide homeowner insurance has begun to cause real estate transactions to tumble out of escrow because home buyers can't find coverage. Experts are now concerned that the problem will begin to hurt the real estate market here.

"If (a home buyer) called me today and wanted homeowner insurance, I couldn't find it — things have really gotten crazy in the last several days," said Alan Mac, a Lafayette, Calif. insurance broker.

Just last week, two of his clients had to extend their escrow period when he couldn't find insurance for them, and another real estate transaction fell apart because there was no insurance available.

Reeling from five major earthquakes in less than seven years, insurance companies are re-examining their exposure to seismic dangers. In California, insurance companies are required by state law to offer earthquake coverage in order to offer standard homeowner policies. Faced with that choice, they are choosing to discontinue offering homeowner insurance altogether.

Following lead

All of the big companies have stopped writing homeowner policies and hordes of smaller ones are following their lead. Those remaining represent only 25 percent of the total need, according to the California Department of Insurance.

There are no statistics on the effect of the insurance problem on homes sales, but an increasing number of real estate brokers and home buyers are complaining that unless there is a quick resolution the problem will begin to hurt the real estate market here.

An example of how quickly things have deteriorated is the just released November issue of the California Association of Realtors magazine, which tells Realtors to get a list from the state department of insurance of companies that provide coverage.

Earlier this fall, the government agency tried to calm an anxious home buying public and the real estate industry promising a list of companies that would provide homeowners insurance.

But the list became outdated so fast that the government agency in the last two weeks stopped releasing it. Every few days another company announces that it is withdrawing from writing new homeowner policies in the state. The most recent announcement came from the California State Automobile Association.

The state also was prompted to discard the list because the companies remaining complained that they were getting flooded with calls for coverage, which increases their exposure and prompts more and more of them to withdraw from the market.

Snowball effect

"There has been a snowball effect and it's getting worse and worse, " said Frederick Pilot, editor of the San Mateo-based Smart's Insurance Bulletin, a trade publication that monitors the insurance industry.

Home buyers are being advised to shop for insurance before they find a house just like they currently do with mortgage financing. Buyers also are being told to include a contingency provision in their sales contract about homeowner insurance.

One alternative is the FAIR plan, which is a state program designed to help the elderly and the poor obtain insurance. In June, this special program has been pushed into service by State Insurance Commissioner John Garamendi as an insurer of last resort for all home buyers.

In the last five months, applications for homeowner insurance from FAIR have nearly doubled up to 500 request a day. The FAIR plan can be reached by calling 800-339-4099.

The FAIR plan will only cover for fire, which means no coverage for general liability and theft. Most experts strongly recommend that homeowners have general liability insurance when owning a home.

GETTING CREATIVE

Everytime a seller lists a home with us, we have a brainstorm. Who are our likely buyers? Where do they live and work? How can we most effectively reach them with information that will attract them to this particular property?

Good agents use a variety of marketing techniques that can be tailored to the individual home they are trying to sell. Home buyers may migrate from rental apartments to condominium to townhouses to single family homes. Sometimes we can go back one step on the housing chain to find the probable purchasers of the property we have listed. We may use the telephone, direct mail or colorful flyers, put ads on community bulletin boards, or canvas office buildings that are an easy commute from our new listing. We also contact colleagues who list and sell homes in the area to make sure they know about our listing and to encourage them to show it to buyers they may meet trying to get their own listings sold. When we combine proactive marketing with realistic pricing, it spells R-E-S-U-L-T-S for our sellers.

Inability to obtain insurance hampering buyers

"It is definitely inferior coverage," said Stan Wieg, legislative advocate for the states Realtors association in Sacramento.

Moreover, it "takes a minimum of three weeks to get a bound policy from FAIR and the premium must be paid up front," according to Donna Cunning, a San Diego insurance agent.

Some consumer activists say the insurance problem is a political ploy by the insurance companies to get the legislature to reverse the state law that obligates insurers to offer earthquake coverage to people who buy homeowners insurance.

But William Ahern, deputy commissioner of the state insurance department, said that's too simplistic of an explanation.

"We have an underlying problem that involves insurance companies evaluating their risk and the real costs associated with earthquakes," he said.

CITY OF CARMEL-BY-THE-SEA CITY COUNCIL
ORDINANCE NO. 94-09
AN ORDINANCE AMENDING SECTION 17.06.036 OF THE MUNICIPAL CODE RELATED TO THE STANDARDS FOR FULL-LINE EATING PLACES IN THE COMMERCIAL DISTRICT

WHEREAS, Municipal Code Section 17.06.036 Note 6 establishes the standards for approval of new full-line eating places located in the Commercial District; and

WHEREAS, these standards were originally adopted by the City Council in 1977 in an effort to limit the proliferation of bar operations in new eating places; and

WHEREAS, these standards allow the sale of alcoholic beverages in new eating places provided that the beverages are prepared at a nonpublic service bar and are consumed at standard height dining tables.

WHEREAS, these standards also allow the consumption of alcoholic beverages provided that substantially all foods from the standard menu are available during regular business hours (excluding the first and last hours of the business day); and

WHEREAS, there are fourteen existing eating places located in the Commercial District that contain a public service bar as part of the restaurant and that these businesses are considered legal nonconforming as defined in the Municipal Code; and

WHEREAS, the Municipal Code does not distinguish between a full-line eating place with a public service bar and a drinking establishment; and

WHEREAS, the lack of specific standards for restaurants with a public service bar has resulted in confusion when reviewing applications for new drinking places (17.06.036 Note 9) and full-line Eating Places (17.06.036 Note 6);.

WHEREAS, the Planning Commission considered this issue during policy discusionss on 23 March and 24 August 1994, and held a public hearing during its regularly scheduled 28 September 1994 meeting.

NOW THEREFORE, THE CITY COUNCIL OF THE CITY OF CARMEL-BY-THE-SEA DOES ORDAIN AS FOLLOWS:

Section One. Amend Section 17.06.036 of the Municipal Code as follows:

NOTE 6

5812 Eating Places - Full Line. A business selling a full line of prepared food and drinks for immediate consumption on the business premises. The business provides tables and chairs, table service, menus, and is available to persons of all ages.

1. There is an adequate area on the site for the closed storage of trash and garbage generated by the use. The on-site storage is designed so that the area can be cleaned and the refuse removed without creating a public nuisance and without being placed on the sidewalks or other public ways.

2. Food sold for consumption off the premises is placed in covered containers or wrappings.

3. The use is not primarily classified as a drive-in, formula, or take-out food establishment.

4. There are restrooms available for use by both sexes within the specific business premises in which the use will be located. These restrooms comply with all provisions of the Uniform Building Code and Plumbing Code and are available for use by both the employees and patrons of the business.

5. The maximum seating capacity does not exceed the standards in the State Fire and Building Codes, and that such seating capacity is posted on the premises.

6. All parking requirements established for the use in Chapter 17.34 of this Code have been met.

7. The business is primarily classified ad an eating place, and any sale of alcoholic beverages is subordinate to this primary use.

8. Substantially all foods from the standard menu are available for purchase during the hours that alcoholic beverages are being served except for the first hour and the last hour of each business day.

9. The applications, menu and plans indicate that the business is primarily an eating place and that no more that 20 percent of the total number of seats are at a bar or in a separate bar room. If the use does not meet this standard, the standards for Drinking Places (See Note 9) shall also apply to the use.

10. The sale of non-food merchandise associated with the use, including but not limited to, apparel, matches, ash trays, and menus is allowed, but such merchandise is not displayed or advertised for sale.

11. Outside seating is allowed subject to an approved design review application in accordance with the standards contained in Section 17.12.086.

12.Approval of the use would not result in more than total of fifteen (15) food stores and/or eating places located within structures fronting on Ocean Avenue.

Section Two. Severability. If any part of this ordinance is found to be unenforceable, such finding shall not affect the enforceability of any other part.

Section Three. Effective Date. This ordinance shall take effect 30 days after final adoption.

PASSED AND ADOPTED BY THE CITY COUNCIL OF THE CITY OF CARMEL-BY-THE-SEA this 1st day of November 1994, by the following roll call vote:

DECLARATION OF NON SERVICE

I, the undersigned am and was on the dates herein mentioned, over the age of eighteen years and not a party to this action, attempted to serve the following.

SUMMONS, COMPLAINT & CASE MANAGEMENT NOTICE and that after due search, careful inquiry and diligent attempts at the only known address for Respondent: 745 Martin St., Monterey, Ca. I have been unable to make delivery of said process on the within named:

ELIZABETH PARKER

Process is being returned without service for the following reasons:

June 13, 1994 attempted service at the house and found it uninhabitable due to a house fire.

I contacted a neighbor who said the defendant had moved to Santa Barbara but that she did not have an address for her. The neighbor gave me a number where I might reach the defendant's daughter to get more information.

I contacted the defendants daughter by phone on June 28, 1994. She explained that her mother had just left from visiting. She refused to give me a phone number or address for the defendant but offered to take my name and number. I explained the purpose of needing to reach her mother and gave her my name and phone number but never heard from her.

On July 25, 1994 upon contacting the Monterey Post Office, I was informed the address on Martin Street was still listed for the defendant.

On July 27, 1994 I spoke to the defendants daughter again and was told she had passed on my number and that was all she could do.

I contacted information in the Santa Barbara area and there is no listing for the defendant.
